Eden in D. C. to Confer With Roosevelt

Ruml's Tax Forgiveness Plan Opposed By Roosevelt

President Speaks Out as Measure's Backers Prepare For Fight in House

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday announced his opposition to the Ruml tax plan as its supporters in the House prepared to battle for its adoption over a compromise newly adjusted to encourage individuals to pay during 1943 taxes on the income of three years.

In his first direct comment on the Beardsley Ruml proposal to abate a full year of individual income liability in establishing pay-as-you-go collections, Mr. Roosevelt told his press conference that such a proposal would directly result in savings to persons in the larger income brackets.

He said the Ruml plan would run counter to the wartime trend in England, where the richer the person is the more he pays toward expenses of the war. He also contended that the net return to the Treasury would be reduced by the Ruml plan, and authorized the Treasury to issue figures which had been submitted to him illustrating these points.

Effect on Revenue Ignored

The Treasury later issued tables to show that the Ruml plan would result in cancelling nearly 10 billion in taxes, including 94 million dollars in taxes for 60 individuals receiving incomes of more than a million dollars each a year. The tables made no reference to effect of the Ruml plan on revenue.

At the Capitol, the House Ways and Means Committee approved "in principle" a special discount proviso, to accompany its proposed 20 per cent withholding levy for the taxable part of wages and salaries, and designed to stimulate the individual to pay up to 30 months' worth of taxes in the 12 months of 1943.

As described, following the committee's closed session, the discount would start operating this year, along with the withholding tax proposed to start July 1, and would operate this way for the average taxpayer:

The individual would be given a 3 per cent discount for paying in full by next June 15 the estimated tax on his 1943 income. To receive that discount he would have been required first to pay in full his tax on 1942 income. Then, on the first of July, the salary or wage earner would be subjected to the withhold-

Red Ration Stamps to Be Good For Meats, Fats on March 29

By Christine Sadler

Food shoppers can begin using the red stamps in War Ration Book Two on Monday, March 29, when sales of meats and fats will go under the OPA point rationing system.

The new program, which puts most of the typical American diet under rationing, is expected by the Government to even up civilian supplies and cause local shortages to disappear quickly.

Although point values for commodities to be added to the rationed lists will not be made public before March 22, OPA officials yesterday declared allotments will be proportionately more generous than limits already placed on canned, frozen and dry fruits and vegetables.

On "opening day," each book holder—regardless of age—will have 16 points at his disposal to be spent interchangeably on any of the meats and fats, or to be held by him for expenditure any time during April.

During the first five weekly periods the stamps will become valid and expire as follows:

Week beginning March 29, red stamps bearing letter A (16 points); stamps expire April 30.

Week beginning April 4, red stamps bearing letter B (16 points); stamps expire April 30.

Week beginning April 11, red stamps bearing letter C (16 points); stamps expire April 30.

Week beginning April 18, red stamps bearing letter D (16 points); stamps expire April 30.

Week beginning April 25, red stamps bearing letter E (16 points); stamps expire (to be announced).

Retailers will be permitted to give "change" in ration stamps under the new program, when a customer finds it impossible to give the exact amount of valid red stamps—or when a dealer fails to cut off just the amount of meat or cheese requested. This is a departure from the processed foods program, which requires the shopper to produce an exact amount of points in blue stamps.

Another difference in the red-stamp rationing system is that it will not involve any declaration by consumers of the amount of rationed foods on hand.

If a commodity to be rationed begins to disappear from stores, however, it is possible retail sales of it

Resources Board Slapped

Senate Sets Up Its Own Unit To Consider Postwar Planning

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday set up machinery of its own for study of postwar planning, but declined to restrict its inquiry to the broad Government-in-industry proposals of President Roosevelt's National Planning Board.

Underscoring widespread sentiment that social and economic planning for the future should be conducted under the aegis of Congress, the Senate at the same time passed an appropriation bill stripped of $200,000 requested by Mr. Roosevelt to permit the board to undertake special studies.

Both Senate actions were taken within a few hours after the President administered to Congress its second public spanking in approximately a month for indifference to the board, whose chairman is Mr. Roosevelt's uncle, Frederic A. Delano.

By resolution sponsored by Chairman George of the Finance Committee, the Senate created a special 10-man Committee on Postwar Economic Policy and Planning. A few minutes later Vice President Wallace named George (Democrat) of Georgia to be chairman of the committee, on which he included Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky, Republican Leader McNary of Oregon and the following Senators:

Hayden of Arizona, O'Mahoney of Wyoming, Lucas of Illinois, and Pepper of Florida (Democrats) and Vandenberg of Michigan, Austin of Vermont and Taft of Ohio (Republicans).

To the extent that it set up a planning committee, the Senate responded to Mr. Roosevelt's challenge that Congress should either provide for his resources board or

Current Red Cross Collections Exceed 1942's Entire Amount

The District Red Cross war fund drive for $1,555,400 in the metropolitan area yesterday topped the entire amount collected last year when contributions totaling $92,436 were reported to boost collections to $512,493.

Announcements from the Government and general business divisions accounted for the encouraging increase, which means that the District has collected 32.9 per cent of its quota after eight days of the campaign.

Thus far, contributions have been received from 63,034 donors, Randolph G. Bishop, war fund manager, told 80 volunteer workers at a "box lunch" meeting at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, 1615 H Street Northwest.

Government agency chairmen reported that they had reached $186,515, or 27 per cent of the quota allotted them. Wallace Flower, division head for the War Production Board, announced that his workers had received $32,000 of their $48,970 goal.

"This, translated into percentages, means that we have reached 65 per cent of our quota with only 46 per cent of our personnel solicited," he said.

Comdr. W. F. Loventhal of the Washington Navy Yard declared that that unit had collected $31,000, or 55 per cent of its goal. William P. Massing of the Federal Communications Commission announced that he has received 75 per cent of the sum alloted him with less than half of FCC workers solicited.

Guest speaker was Richard Allen, Red Cross director of foreign service recently returned from North Africa, who told workers of the ingenuity of Red Cross personnel overseas in providing soldiers with necessities and recreation facilities

Hits at 'Baby Brokers'

Court Backs Child-Placement Control in Sentencing Woman

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Justice James W. Morris, in sentencing Mrs. Ann Collin on two counts of larceny after trust in a "baby broker" case yesterday, stated that "it is not probable that such offense would have been committed if society had provided, as it unquestionably should, proper machinery for the supervision and regulation of those working in the field of child placement."

Meanwhile Commissioner Guy Mason announced that steps to bring the District's long awaited child-placement licensing law to actuality had moved forward swiftly through the action of Ray L. Huff, director of the Board of Public Welfare, in sending a recommendation to the Commissioners that the bill be reintroduced in Congress.

Mrs. Collins, whose conviction March 5 again focused local attention on what social workers call "outmoded" child adoption laws here, was given a suspended sentence of from four months to a year and a day and was fined $120.

Mrs. Collins also was placed on probation requiring her to pay $50 to the mother of the child in the case, $100 to the adopting parents and the bill of the attending doctor for services rendered to the mother.

Justice Morris' full statement was:

"While it is no excuse or justification for the misrepresentations which are the basis of the offense for which you were convicted, it

President's Powers on Salaries Cut

House Rejects Compromises; Votes for Own Control Plan

In the sharpest direct rebuke to the President yet administered in the new Congress, the House yesterday voted overwhelmingly to clip the Chief Executive's power over salary regulation, and to establish a control formula of its own.

After rejecting in rapid-fire order a series of compromises, the House sustained by a vote of 212 to 145 the salary formula of Representative Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma, against determined efforts of Administration backers to send it back to committee. It then promptly approved, 268 to 129, a bill coupling the Disney salary measure with legislation increasing the national debt limit from 125 to 210 billion dollars.

On both sides of the Capitol, leaders of the drive to repeal the President's $25,000 ceiling on salaries (after taxes) predicted that the Senate would follow the lead of the House by a similar margin. The Senate Finance Committee has approved the debt increase, but instructed its chairman, Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, not to take a bill to the floor until the House spoke on the salary question.

Support in Senate

One member, informed of how the House had spoken, predicted that the Disney bill would be supported by all but three of the 21 Finance Committee members, and Senate Administration leaders conceded that the committee might be expected to reassert its decision of last year against a $25,000 ceiling.

Some House members who led the attack on the Disney plan, however, were inclined to think that issues raised in the stormy two-day floor battle might lead to Senate indorsement of one of the several compromise proposals which received strong support yesterday.

These were generally aimed at maintaining the present control over salary increases in the range below $25,000 which, it was contended, would be removed by the Disney bill, and at the same time repudiating the President's authority to reduce any salary below some level chosen by Congress.

Authors of Measure

Their authors included Representatives Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, Wolcott (Republican) of Michigan, and Gearhart (Republican) of California.

Any of the compromises, it was indicated, would have been more palatable to the Administration than was Disney's from the standpoint of controlling inflation and averting demands for wage increases, but the chance to support one of them was apparently rejected on the theory Disney could

Nazis Lose Vyazma, Gain At Kharkov

Street Fighting Reported in Ukraine Capital; Road to Smolensk Open

By Edward D. Ball
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Saturday), March 13.—The Red Army captured Vyazma and killed 9000 Germans yesterday in the powerful central front sweep toward the Nazi anchor of Smolensk, but in the south Moscow announced another withdrawal in the critical third battle for Kharkov, which the Germans said was the scene of a bitter street struggle.

Outnumbered Russian troops again fell back west of Kharkov to new positions, the midnight Moscow bulletin said, while on the south side of the Ukraine stronghold eight waves of attacking Nazis were beaten down, the enemy losing 23 tanks and 800 men.

The German high command had announced earlier that its troops had broken into the city. Accounts from both sides made it clear that the battle was approaching the magnitude of the fight for Stalingrad. The Russians stressed that their troops were combatting "numerically superior" forces, reinforced by reserves brought from western Europe.

Late last night the house-to-house struggle still was going on, German radio reports said, and Rome's station quoted Berlin dispatches saying Nazi troops "occupy the northern and western parts of the town as well as the center as far as the Red Square."

Soviet troops were said still to hold the southern part.

One Berlin propaganda agency, the International Information Bureau, earlier had been quoted by the German radio as saying that Kharkov was recaptured, but this subsequently was qualified to acknowledge "extremely fierce fighting is still in progress in South Kharkov."

Drive Toward Smolensk

The Russians were under assault not only at Kharkov but on a long line running southeast of the city into the Donets Basin at a point below Voroshilovgrad. In the intermediate Izyum sector, 75 miles southeast of Kharkov, the midnight communique said, one Soviet unit had killed 300 Germans in repulsing another German attack.

On the Central Front it was a different story. Although the Germans said they had abandoned Vyazma, the Russians said it fell only after a "determined assault"

U. S. Bombers Again Pound Rouen Yards

Heavy Damage Results, No Planes Lost; R.A.F. Blasts at Stuttgart

By the Associated Press

London, March 12.—For the second time in a week, American heavy bombers today attacked the railway and supply center of Rouen, France, following a heavy night assault by the R. A. F. on Stuttgart, industrial and communications point in southwest Germany.

Escorted by swarms of spitfires, the American planes pounded oil tanks and railroad yards at Rouen in a 45-mile thrust into France designed to wreck vital German rail communications leading to the coast. Little antiaircraft fire was encountered, a fact which puzzled the raiders.

Not an American plane was lost, U. S. A. A. F. headquarters and the British Air Ministry announced in a joint communique which said the escorting Spitfires destroyed three enemy fighters.

The pilots reported direct hits on a concentration of 1000 freight cars and fires bursting from large oil tanks nearby.

German Focke-Wulfs and Messerschmitts were kept so far away by the R. A. F. escort that they could hardly be seen among the huge swarms of Spitfires which covered the bombers on all sides.

The attack came only a few hours after a heavy concentration of British bombers had plowed a path of death and destruction through Stuggart. Eleven of the night bombers failed to get back from the raid, the eighth blasting of Germany in 11 nights this month.

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, March 12.—Marshal Erwin Rommel's second attempt to beat back the Allied ring tightening around his Axis troops in Tunisia has failed under sweeping low-level aerial attack by the R. A. F. which forced his armored units to withdraw from Ksar Rhilane, 40 miles south of the Mareth Line, leaving 21 wrecked vehicles and seven guns on the battlefield.

The R. A. F. reported its Western Desert force destroyed all but nine armored vehicles out of a total estimated at 30 in Rommel's attacking group.

Low-flying desert fighters and bombers ripped at Axis ground forces throughout the day, leaving a great portion of the attacking German motored units in flames.

Rommel's futile attempt to break the Allied ring closing around him was coupled with three fruitless local assaults by Col. Gen Jurgen von Arnim's Axis troops in the

Knee-deep in hats, Designer Lilly Dache last night gave 1500 Government girls a whirlwind millinery lesson in versatility to wind up the career clinic sponsored at the Department of Interior auditorium by the Navy Department's Bureau of Ordnance and Mademoiselle magazine.

And only the clever fingers of Mme. Dache could have created the colorful mass of hat boxes, artificial flowers, tissue paper of every rainbow hue—and hats, hats, hats.

La Dache herself sported the least startling of her own creations, a small black sequin crepe affair that perched just on the brim of her upswept curls. The assorted bonnets, ribbons, roses, cornflowers and turbans that rolled from two gigantic hat boxes were placed in quick succession on the blond head of New York model Bobby Youman—who looked like a Mademoiselle cover in each. (Two admiring gentlemen in the fourth row said she would have been beautiful in a coal scuttle.)

Tiny Madame Dache struggled simultaneously with a French accent, a mouthful of hat pins, a microphone that just missed the top of the head and a necessity for talking with her hands. With these small handicaps she still draped around Bobby's exquisitely modeled face a dozen variations of headgear that America will be wearing in a few months—flowers draped over each ear from long ribbons, hair piling from rich purple turban, flowers arranged about the neck or waist for sheer verve, and one amazing purple apron in which milady could go dancing, complete with floral design.

The Dache design for hat success is—wear the chapeau to suit the man.

"When he says to you: 'That's a silly hat,' he means, 'Darling, it does not make you as pretty as you are,'" she warned. "Men are funny about hats but they can tell what becomes you, so don't mistrust their judgment.

"Never buy a hat sitting down. Get the full view of yourself in a long mirror—and buy a hat when your hair is at its worst, for if it is becoming then, it will always be becoming."

Other guest speaker was H. Stanley Marcus, recently a consultant to the War Production Board on fashions, currently vice president of a Dallas (Tex.) department store.

"Every city has its own fads," he said, "but in Washington I've seen one that is the poorest excuse

Overseas Plans Told

Army of 8 Million Projected For 1943-44, Gen. Edwards Says

(Induction of Negroes in Navy and Marine Corps to start soon. Page 7.)

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Present War Department plans are apparently to build to an Army of 8.2 millions in 1943 and stay at that level during 1944, it was disclosed yesterday.

During the present year, it is planned to step up our forces overseas from around 1.5 million to 2.7 millions, with a goal of 4.75 millions scheduled to be overseas by the end of next year.

These facts were officially revealed to the Senate Appropriations Committee last month by Maj. Gen. I. H. Edwards, assistant chief of staff, and made public by the committee as part of a transcript of testimony on manpower.

General Edwards testified at a time when the War Department was being criticized by farm bloc leaders and others for building what some called too large an army in view of requirements for farm manpower and available shipping space.

Edwards said the size of the army figures for 1943 were set with shipping in mind as "the bottleneck," considering estimates on "the shipping that will be available to move trained units overseas by the end of 1944."

"In building this army of ours," General Edwards told the committee, "and in determining that we needed 8.2 million men, we had to look ahead, not only to the end

Briton Here To Arrange Tightening Of Coalition

Leaders Will Lay Groundwork for Future Meetings Of United Nations

By the Associated Press

Anthony Eden, British Foreign Minister, flew into this war capital last night for conferences looking toward discussions among all the United Nations on the tremendous mutual problems of the war and of the peace to come.

The tall visitor, here at the invitation of the United States, hurried at once to the British Embassy. He will see President Roosevelt and hold a press conference today. An inspection of American war factories is planned before he returns to London.

Said a cryptic White House announcement—the only official statement on Eden's arrival:

"The purpose of his visit is to undertake a general exchange of views and to discuss the most effective methods of preparing for meetings between the governments of all United Nations with the United States Government on all aspects of the war situation, to consider questions arising out of the war."

Anglo-American Relations

[A London dispatch from the Chicago Sun's bureau there said the likely topics including future Anglo-American relations with Russia; French Africa politics; measures to forestall British and United States rivalry in civil aviation after the war; postwar economic schemes, including the immediate supply of food, medicines and raw materials to stricken Europe; allocation of strategic bases in the Pacific the Atlantic and the Caribbean and creation of an asylum for Jewish and other hunted refugees.—Editor's note.]

Eden's close relations with Russia were regarded by some observers as having more than passing significance in connection with his visit to this country.

As recently as February 21 Eden, in a speech commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Red army, told an English audience that Britain and Russia are agreed on the broad principles of collaboration for peace as well as on the utter destruction of the Axis.

State Dept. Hears Hitler Suffers From Breakdown

By the Associated Press

Global curiosity about what the heck has happened to Hitler went up another notch yesterday when Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, said the State Department had received unconfirmed reports that the Fuehrer was suffering from a complete breakdown.

Welles did not imply the department attached much importance to these reports. In answer to questions at a press conference, he simply said that unconfirmed reports had been received similar to those recently published in various quarters.

One of the most recent of the published reports had Hitler recuperating in seclusion at Berchtesgaden, where a closely guarded mountain top retreat provides him utter seclusion.

Goebbels Sings Song Of Optimism

By the Associated Press

Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Germany's minister of propaganda, writes in the latest issue of his magazine, Das Reich, that the war on the Russian Front "has undergone an essential change in our favor," the Berlin radio said yesterday in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press in New York.

At the same time, the radio said, Goebbels warned the people of Germany not to be "swayed by any rash illusions" nor to "stagger blindly into a fresh and more perilous crisis."

"We have been shaken by misfortune so great as to almost deprive us of consciousness," Goebbels was quoted as writing. "While we were thus scourged as by thongs of a whip we took a vow that it would never happen again.

"The situation in the East during past months was exactly as we described it. Meanwhile, it has undergone an essential change in our favor, and of course we do not hesitate to bring this fact just as frankly to the knowledge of the public.

"Total war, which we are now waging to a small extent but the greater part of which still is in preparation, could hardly be expected to have already contributed to overcoming the present crisis.

"Its purpose is, rather, to serve to prevent similar crises arising in the future. The necessity of total war is the great lesson taught us by our experiences of the past winter."

Armed With Cannon, Units Are Led By Regular Officers

By the Associated Press

Bern, March 12.—French youths drafted for compulsory labor in Germany are fleeing into the French Alps to swell the ranks of guerilla bands headed by officers of the former French army, and are equipped with rifles, machineguns and even 75-mm. cannon, reports filtering across the closely guarded frontier said tonight.

Vichy was silent on a London story that the patriots had killed around 300 Germans last month.

Underground reports reaching Switzerland told of increasing French resistance, particularly in the Haute Savoie region where the Italians were given the occupation job after Nazi troops were sent to Russia.

The Vichy government was reported by the Geneva Tribune to have sent 800 police guards in armored cars into the Haute Savoie region of the Alps tonight in an effort to subdue the guerillas.

"These grave events" led the occupation authorities to further restrict frontier control, the newspaper said. During the last two days no French official has been permitted to cross the frontier.

La Suisse of Geneva said workers called up for Germany prefer to quit their jobs for the mountain fastnesses where "veritable" resistance is being organized. The newspaper said 500 men under orders of General Cartier and officers of the twenty-seventh regiment of Annecy were quartered in the mountains next to the Swiss border.

Hide In Summits

Units were declared operating above St. Jeoire, La Clusaz and Scionzier. In the region near Mount Blanc between Samoens, Cluse and Chamonix, about 1000 men were reported armed with revolvers, rifles and machineguns. The Journal of Geneva said all summits overlooking the valley of the Arve serve as refuges for these guerrillas who are "organized by superior officers and have at their disposition not only rifles and machineguns but even 75's."

The newspaper said there was great activity of "Communistic and terrorist elements" in southeast France. At Nimes, a police inspector was gravely wounded while attempting to arrest a suspected couple at Paris, an extensive purge was reported under way to eliminate idlers and black marketeers.

The Vichy government's efforts to fill Nazi demands for workers were declared provoking violence. At one small village near the Swiss frontier, a French policeman endeavoring to arrest a youth who ignored a call for the labor draft was reported shot down yesterday in a doorway. The youth and his companions fled.

12 of 800 Drafted

La Suisse reported that of 800 young Frenchmen told to present themselves at Annemasse last Saturday for physical examination, only 150 responded and authorities succeeded in drafting only a dozen of these for Germany.

The Journal of Geneva commented that very few have "gone of their own free will to Germany."

"Some were forced to go because of material needs but others refuse and to avoid forced labor, they leave home in increasing ranks as interior refugees," the Journal added. "The day they make this decision they are outlawed. They no longer have anything to lose and they are willing to dare anything.

Refuged in the mountains and high plateaus and forests, the units are fed by French people and strike suddenly against isolated occupation troops and sabotage communication lines.

1000 Hold Heights

More than 1000 of these patriots were reported yesterday to have held heights above Thonon on Lake Geneva and refused to obey orders of a mobilized brigade sent by Laval's Vichy government. Thonon is reported in a sort of state of siege. Mayor Trolliet and his family were said to have been jailed because of failure to recruit workers for Germany.

The Journal of Geneva said the phantom warfare in France had become general, especially in the Alps, Brittany, in departments in the East, and in the great urban centers. A constant liaison was reported between Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Fighting French and the centers of resistance.

"It is not rare that the RAF bombers bring arms to France," the Journal said.

The ranks of the patriots were reported swelled by the demobilization of the French army.

"The day the Reich suppressed the modest military organization of France, it threw into the streets at least 80,000 men who were joined by sailors after the fleet was scuttled," the Journal said. "These young men are active and energetic and unable to accustom themselves to forced idleness. Many desired to go to Africa but were unable to escape so they took to the brush. They now form bands determined to fight the occupation troops."

tary of State Sumner Welles. British Embassy telephone lines were swamped with calls of would-be greeters when the arrival became known. Meantime, Secretary of State Cordell Hull terminated a Florida vacation for a swift trip home—and in faraway Moscow Premier Stalin, told of Eden's trip, was described as having "heard of it with pleasure."

It was indicated that little is likely to be made public concerning some of these discussions, except as agreements may be reached. General conjecture last night was that the question of future collaboration with Russia will loom large among them and directly or indirectly affect them all.

In their exploratory talks Eden and Hull may, observers here believe, seek to pave the way for United Nations conferences first on such problems as offer the greatest liklihood of concrete agreement.

One of these is the creation of a United Nations relief and rehabilitation agency which could organize the resources and personnel of all the United Nations governments for the task of emergency and postwar relief.

With a precedent for United Nations conferences thus established, more ticklish problems such as postwar air routes might be tackled next, gradually leading up to United Nations conferences on all postwar problems, even the delicate and dangerous questions of postwar frontiers.

Paralleling such preparations for general conferences of all the United Nations, it is expected various problems of vital and immediate interest to the United States and Britain will be discussed.

The White House statement on Eden's arrival said:

"Mr. Anthony Eden, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has arrived in Washington on the invitation of the United States Government.

"The purpose of his visit is to undertake a general exchange of views with the United States Government on all aspects of the war situation, and to discuss the most effective method of preparing for meetings between the governments of all United Nations to consider questions arising out of the war.

"Mr. Eden will also wish to see at first-hand something of the great war effort of the United States."

Eden visited the United States in 1932 and again four years ago, when he made a sight-seeing tour de luxe, visited the World's Fair and took in the New York night spots, including the hilarious show, "Hellzapoppin."

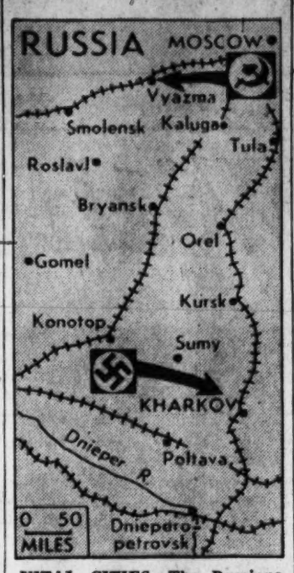
Variously styled then as the "White Knight of Geneva" and "the Best Dressed Diplomat in Europe," Eden took it all in with almost boyish eagerness and said he "Loved it—every bit."

Ceiling Violators March in Disgrace In Chungking

Chungking, March 12 (AP).—Violators of a price ceiling program were paraded in disgrace through the flag-decorated streets of Chungking today and confiscated opium paraphernalia was burned in a public bonfire as an austerity keynote was sounded in a celebration of the eighteenth anniversary of the death of Dr. Sun-Yat-sen, the Chinese Republic's first president.

It was also the fourth anniversary of the founding of the national spiritual mobilization movement, and the Chinese press echoed Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's call for autere wartime living stressing the need for a greater war effort both by the nation and by individuals.

Reds Take Vyazma, Nazis in Kharkov



VITAL CITIES—The Russians occupied Vyazma yesterday in their drive on Smolensk, but to the south the Germans were reported battling in the streets of Kharkov

as the Red Army pushed on along the railway leading directly to Smolensk, 100 miles away.

Smolensk was threatened by other Russian troops striking down from the Bely sector, 80 miles to the northeast, and army formations fanning out between Vyazma and Bely in the Sychevka sector. Aside from enormous booty seized at Vyazma, the Russians said their troops had taken more than a score of Nazi tanks, and large quantities of other equipment in the steady pursuit of the Germans.

The only other major action reported on the Russian front was a raid by Russian Stormovik planes on the Nazi airdrome at Orel, the hinge of the central and southern fronts. Fifteen Nazi planes were destroyed and 20 damaged, the communique said.

As in the cases of Rzhev and Gzhatsk, the Germans were the first to announce the fall of Vyazma, 130 miles west of Moscow. This was pictured, as usual, as a "shortening of the lines."

Military observers here said the Russian reverses near Kharkov were counterbalanced by the capture of Vyazma, the last Hitlerian strongpoint between Moscow and Smolensk.

Nazi Eastern Setup Periled

Even if the Germans should regain Kharkov, these observers said the loss of Vyazma and the consequent immediate menace to Smolensk meant that the entire German eastern front setup was in dire peril.

Kharkov was the scene of a tremendous battle October 29, 1941, when the Germans sacrificed 120,000 dead and wounded to capture it. It was a vortex of great clashes last spring when the Russians counterattacked but failed to reach the city. The Germans then used it as a springboard for their offensive that finally was stopped at Stalingrad and near the Grozny oil fields of the Caucasus.

The Germans' costly efforts to retrieve the Ukrainian center may mean that they plan to use it for another—and possibly their last—offensive to achieve the unrealized ambition to bisect Russia in the south by driving to the Caspian Sea and wheeling up the Volga to cut in behind Moscow.

The big "if" of such a grandiose plan is whether the Germans have the men and material to exploit such a lengthy line.

City's Fall Seen Morale Aid

It is conceded that German reentry into Kharkov would have considerable value to German army morale and a helpful psychological effect upon the German civilian population.

Russian dispatches said the situation at Kharkov was grave and that the German drive was on as massive a scale as was the assault against Stalingrad, 375 miles to the southeast, where the Russians fought in virtually every street and turned the tide last November 19.

Book Reveals Incidents of Hess' Capture

By the Associated Press

London, March 12.—Soldier guards said they asked Rudolf Hess, former No. 2 deputy to Adolf Hitler, soon after he parachuted to earth in Scotland May 10, 1941, if he would like to return to Germany and Hess shouted:

"No, no, no, no!"

This and other details of Hess' flight to Britain were told for the first time in "Roof Over Britain," the official story of Britain's anti-aircraft defenses, published today. Hess is now a prisoner of war.

Hess' plane, a Messerschmitt 110, was sighted circling over a searchlight post several miles from Glasgow at 11:07 p. m.

The pilot (Hess) switched off the engine and made a shallow dive straight at the post. The men on the ground believed at first they were being dive-bombed, but then saw a parachute stream out. The plane crashed 250 yards away and burst into flames.

Two antiaircraft signalmen found the parachutist with an injured ankle, sitting in an armchair in a farmer's house. He extended his hands to show they were empty and said:

"Ah, British soldiers—no guns, no bombs."

He first told them his name was "Alfred Horn." After a pause he added: "I have a very important message for the Duke of Hamilton." He said he had met the duke at the Olympic games in Berlin.

In his pockets he had two hypodermic syringes, a phial of some liquid and two bottles of white tablets.

Asked where he came from, Hess replied: "Munich—in four hours."

As to aerial defense, the book said Britain's antiaircraft guns shot down 600 enemy planes—one for every six downed by fighters—during the first two years of the war.

The guns bagged 70 planes in one week, the book said. Many times the heavy fire turned back 50 per cent of the raiders trying to reach the defended districts of London.

U. S. Planes Again Smash at Rouen

acknowledged that "great damage" was done in the industrial city and that there were casualties.

The Germans struck back with three sharp reprisal raids during the day and other enemy planes appeared over a district in northeast England tonight. They were met by heavy antiaircraft fire as they flew in fairly low across the coast and dropped flares.

The Vichy radio said American planes made a "violent raid" on a town in Normandie and that "numerous buildings were destroyed."

The broadcast said the suburbs of the town also were attacked and that "the number of victims seems to be high judging from the flood of wounded arriving at first aid centers." The Paris radio reported 50 bodies had been recovered from the debris.

Returning crewmen described the results of the Rouen raid as "especially good."

The terrific Allied aerial onslaught moved the Luftwaffe to strike back at Britain harder than it had done for weeks, sending 74 planes against various points in the past 24 hours with a loss of 13 destroyed and several damaged.

About 25 German planes smashed last night at a northeast coast town, which the German radio identified as Newcastle. Two dozen Focke-Wulf 190s and Messerschmitts burst through strong defenses to bomb and machine gun the suburbs of London this morning. Five attackers stabbed at a southwest coast town this afternoon.

Norwegian Fliers Down Five

Twelve fighter bombers and 12 fighters reached the city's outlying districts, but Norwegian pilots with the R. A. F. sent five crashing to the ground without receiving as much as a scratch on their own planes. Five other attackers were damaged.

Striking between 7:30 and 8 a. m. the raiders shot up three trains, buses and streets with cannon and machine-gun fire and dropped a small number of bombs. A store and two empty schools were hit.

At least 20 persons were reported killed in the raids and many injured. Others were missing.

In the ruins of one house a man and his wife and their 8-day-old baby were found dead in bed. It appeared that the man tried to protect his wife and child with his own body.

The Ministry of Home Security announced today that civilian air raid casualties in Britain during February totaled 252 killed or missing and 347 injured.

Tons of Bombs

U. S. Fliers Blast Jap Burma Base

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, March 12.—Continuing their destructive assaults against Japanese installations in Burma, heavy four-motored bombers of the Tenth United States Air Force poured "many tons" of explosives on an enemy airfield at Mingaladon, north of Rangoon, and then shot down three Zero fighters in a 40-minute running air battle on Wednesday, an American communique said today.

Without loss to themselves, the heavily armored American planes damaged three other Zeros and left an additional four "probably damaged," the communique said.

An attack by American medium bombers the same day on the Goktelk viaduct accomplished no visible results, the report said, but yesterday the mediums returned to their regular "milk run" bombing of the vital Myingne Railway bridge near Mandalay and reported scoring two near hits on the northern approaches. Both of these missions also were reported to have been carried out without loss.

Blenheim bombers escorted by Hurricane fighters carried out a low-level bombing and machine-gun attack yesterday on Japanese positions at Donbaik in western Burma, a British communique said today. Elsewhere R. A. F. fighters made offensive sweeps. One plane was missing from these operations.

One of the eight Japanese columns thrusting southward on a 100-mile front across the middle Yangtze has been battered back to the river by Chinese troops, but the invaders gained in see-saw fighting at other points, a communique said.

Chungking, March 12 (AP).—Chungking authorities expressed belief today that the Japanese drive in Hupeh Province is designed to safeguard Japanese communications on the Yangtse River and in no way imperils Chungking, some 350 miles distant.

An overland drive toward Chungking through difficult country would require at least 10 divisions, they said. An Army spokesman estimated yesterday that the Japanese were using 20,000 men in the current drive.

Allies Tighten Tunisian Noose

Sedjenane sector of northern Tunisia and hastened the day of the inevitable showdown battle between Anglo-American forces and the Axis.

A French high command communique reported a detachment of French infantry and Allied armored cars made a "strong raid" east of Ousseltia in central Tunisia, capturing German prisoners and returning to the Allied lines without a loss.

The communique also disclosed that the Fighting French forces who marched across the Sahara participated in the fighting at Ksar Rhilane.

There was no confirmation from this headquarters of a German communique report of an Allied tank attack, which it said was "thrown back."

It was possible that this referred to the Ksar Rhilane fighting put in reverse. There the Allied force threatened the German flank but did not attack it.

During the withdrawal of German forces in the recent abortive attack on the British Eighth Army at Medenine, fighters and fighter-bombers gave Rommel's retreating Panzers a severe pounding, destroying a large number of armored vehicles.

In yesterday's attack, a 27-year-old wing commander, referring to the assault at Ksar Rhilane, declared fighters and bombers knocked out eight vehicles in the first sweep, two in the second and 11 in the third.

"Then came 10 minutes of the speediest strafing I have ever seen," he said in describing the third attack. "We got 10 flamers this time."

A Canadian pilot said the greatest threat to the Allied planes was the danger of colliding with each other because there were so many of them in the air.

Two Kiska Raids Score Hits on Jap Positions

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

In two smashing raids on Kiska in the Aleutian Islands, United States heavy and medium bombers and fighters scored hits on Japanese positions, the Navy announced yesterday.

During the morning of March 10, a force of aircraft, not identified by types, attacked enemy installations and scored hits, the communique said. Later the same day, a heavy force of Liberator heavy bombers, Mitchell mediums and Lightning fighters returned and continued the assault on enemy forces clinging to the western Aleutians.

No enemy airplanes were reported and the attackers flew through antiaircraft fire without loss. More frequent raids on Kiska, which have been reported in recent days led observers here to conclude that United States air forces on Andreanof Island had been granted a series of breaks in the almost constantly bad weather west of Alaska.

Text of Navy communique No. 307:

"North Pacific:

"1. On March 10:

"(a) During the morning, United States aircraft attacked Japanese positions at Kiska and scored bomb hits in the target area.

"(b) Later in the morning, a force of Liberator heavy bombers (Consolidated B-24), Mitchell medium bombers (North American B-2) and Lightning fighters (Lockheed P-38) again attacked enemy installations at Kiska. Antiaircraft batteries were bombed and strafed at low level and hits were scored. Three buildings in the camp area were damaged by heavy bomb hits. Antiaircraft fire was encountered but all United States planes returned.

"South Pacific: (All dates are East Longitude.)

"On March 11, during the early morning, Liberator heavy bombers (Consolidated PB4Y) carried out minor bombing attacks on Japanese positions at Kahili and Ballale in the Shortland Island area and at Vila in the central Solomons. Results were not observed. All United States planes returned."

Allies Blast 6 Jap Planes, Ship at Ambon

By Murlin Spencer
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Saturday), March 13.—Allied airmen scored a direct hit on a 7000-ton Japanese merchant ship, damaged two smaller vesels, and "shot out of action" six enemy fighters without the loss of a plane, a communique said today.

The 7000-ton ship was caught with a 500-pound bomb dropped by an American Liberator over Ambon Harbor, Amboina Island, despite intense antiaircraft fire. In a running fight with eight Japanese fighters four of the enemy were knocked out, and returning airmen said at least two of them were destroyed.

Heavy clouds prevented observation of the full results of the raid.

The other two Japanese fighters shot out of action attempted to stop a raid on Lautem on Timor Island where two smaller ships—a 300-ton motor vessel and a lugger—were strafed.

Parked enemy aircraft also were damaged at a Timor airdrome by low-flying Allied planes.

American, Dutch and Australian fliers kept the Japanese busy over a wide area, and the other main assault was a predawn blast at Lakunai airdrome, the Japanese aerial nest at Rabaul in New Britain. Approximately 500 demolition and fragmentation bombs fell in the target area, the communique said.

Attack planes continued their tactics of subjecting enemy positions in the Mubo sector immediately below Salamau, New Guinea, to strafing attacks, in support of Allied ground forces to the east.

Soviet Receiving U. S. Aid via Pacific

Materiel Being Sent Across Siberia, Officials Reveal

By the Associated Press

The first official revelation that large quantities of lend-lease aid is moving to Russia via the Pacific created new interest in Washington yesterday on the question of American assistance to the Soviet.

The Lend-Lease Administration merely said that in the last year this country began lend-lease shipments to Russia by both air and water from the Pacific Coast. It declined to elaborate.

A map accompanying the report to Congress, however, showed various approximate routes over which shipments are made.

One curved line extended from the United States West Coast to Siberia, another from the East Coast to the Murmansk-Archangel area of European Russia and a third to the Persian Gulf-Iran route to Russia.

The three lines were approximately the same width, and a note said they indicated relative quantities of lend-lease goods shipped and the country of its destination. The note said, however, that the lines did not show exact shipping routes nor the location of ports.

Shipments across the Pacific to Siberia necessarily would move close to Japanese territory. While Russia and this country are allies in the war against Germany, Russia and Japan are at peace and have a nonaggression agreement. It was regarded by some as probable that Japan had full knowledge of shipments via the Pacific and did not interfere with them.

The report said about two thirds of all supplies sent to Russia from this country had been transported in American ships, the remainder by other United Nations ships, including Russian.

There was nothing in the report to indicate what proportion was carried in Russian ships.

War Sidelights

British, Axis To Exchange Prisoners

Ankara, March 11 (Delayed) (AP).—An exchange of British and Axis prisoners will take place March 21 and 22 in the harbor of Mersin, Turkey, it was announced today.

Each side will exchange 788 officers and men, it was stated.

The Axis prisoners mostly Italians from two Italian destroyers which were scuttled at Jedda and a few Germans who were interned at Saudi Arabia. It was stated that the prisoners from both mainly were able-bodied.

Spellman's Message

New York, March 12 (AP).—Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York today conveyed to the American people the special blessing of Pope Pius XII for their support to the work of the Holy See, "particularly in relieving the homeless and hungry war sufferers, war refugees and prisoners throughout the world."

The message was contained in a postscript to a pastoral letter by the archbishop appealing for contributions to the bishops' relief committee.

200 Greeks Massacred

New York, March 12 (INS).—At least 200 Greeks were killed when Axis armored cars fired on demonstrating residents of Athens, the British radio said today. The broadcast, recorded by C. B. S., said the Greeks marched through the streets of the capital shouting "down with mobilization" and singing the Greek national anthem.

Welles Lists Amount of Oil Sent to Spain

By the Associated Press

Shipments of petroleum products from the United States to Spain during the last two years, the House was informed yesterday, totalled 245,118 metric tons (roughly 1,942,000 barrels), and were made with the understanding the products would not leave Spanish territory.

This information was in a letter from Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles to Chairman Bloom, (Democrat) New York, of the Foreign Affairs Committee in response to a resolution seeking to determine how foreign petroleum shipments affected the domestic supply, especially on the Eastern seaboard.

Exports of petroleum products from the United States to Spain were 227,347 metric tons (about 1,800,000 barrels) in 1941 and 17,771 metric tons (about 142,000 barrels) in 1942, Welles advised Bloom, and "these are the only shipments made from the United States in the last two years," the last bulk shipment having been on February 19, 1942.

(These figures compare with a daily average consumption in the 17 Eastern States of 1,250,000 barrels).

However, Welles continued, "by arrangement between the governments of the United States and Great Britain," Spain has been permitted to carry limited quantities of South American oil in Spanish vessels through the blockade.

New York, March 12 (AP).—The National Maritime Union (C. I. O.) announced today that its port of New York membership had adopted a resolution stating that it would "not be a party to carrying vital materials to Franco Spain which can be and will be utilized to bolster the Nazi war machine."

Victor Weingarten, N. M. U. assistant director of public relations, said that a group of 20 seamen from New York and Baltimore would deliver a copy of the resolution to the State Department in Washington Monday.

The N. M. U. said the resolution read in part:

"Some sections of the State Department have been flirting with notorious Fascists and seem intent upon losing the peace while thousands of seamen and soldiers are dying to win the war against Fascism.

"It is well known that Franco Spain is stooging for Nazi Germany and has troops fighting our most effective ally, the Soviet Union, probably with materials we are furnishing."

Roosevelt Lauds Work of Kenney In Pacific War

President Roosevelt said at his press conference yesterday that a grand job had been done by Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of the Allied air forces in the Southwest Pacific, which recently destroyed a 22-ship Jap convoy in the Bismarck Sea.

Kenney is now in Washington, along with Maj. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, chief of staff of Gen. Douglas MacArthur in the Southwest Pacific area, as members of a mission, headed by Sutherland, to discuss problems of the war against the Japs.

The Chief Executive expects to see Sutherland and Kenney while they are here.

Russia Should Not Try to Grab Territory, Roosevelt Hints

By Edward Angly

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Some remarks by President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday struck a goodly portion of his audience as being perhaps an oblique hint to Joseph Stalin that his partners among the United Nations, and some of Russia's neighbors, would appreciate assurance that the U. S. S. R. isn't going to grab anybody else's territory.

Russia has already absorbed the Baltic states, Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia. At the war's beginning the Soviets invaded eastern Poland, later conquered part of Finland, and cut a slice from Rumania.

Yesterday the President began his press conference by describing as a good outline of United Nations policy a recent statement by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to the people of Japanese-occupied Thailand, assuring them that China and her Allies have no territorial ambitions there. Mr. Roosevelt said he thought this expressed the general point of view of the United Nations in regard to the grabbing of territory.

General Chiang's statement said China and Thailand had been at peace for more than 1000 years. The United Nations were dedicated, he said, to liberating countries under the Japanese and German yokes.

Later the President was noncommittal when asked if he intended to meet Stalin. He declined to be drawn out on the subject of Soviet-American relations.

Having in mind the international storm which blew up out of remarks by the American Ambassador to Russia, Admiral William D. Standley, a reporter asked the President if he cared to "comment on the element of frankness in the character of our admirals."

Like everybody else, Mr. Roosevelt remarked light-heartedly, some admirals are sometimes too frank and others not frank enough; sometimes they talk too much, sometimes too little.

Point was added to the President's reference to Chiang Kai-shek's disavowal of territorial ambitions an hour later when Mme. Chiang's brother, T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister, called upon the President and, on leaving, said China had no desire to acquire further territory anywhere. China, he said, hoped to see Korea, as well as Thailand, become "an entirely independent country" after the war.

At the State Department Acting Secretary Sumner Welles declined to comment on the speech Thursday night in Philadelphia by William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to Russia, then to France, who said if the United States did not quickly shape its peace plans, its bargaining power might be lost, and Russia would hold the whip hand after the war.

for fashion: the shortest skirts of any city in the world, from the Social Security Building right to the Navy Department."

Difficulties in women's shopping, he declared, stem principally from inexperience.

"No matter how many stores you shop in, you will discover that retail prices in most stores are just about the same; there are very few exceptions where there is a wide difference in value. My recommendation is to find the store that suits you best and buy there."

Most Government girls, he added, look as if they are going to a tea dance after work each day. "There are more cocktail dresses sold here for business than in any city in the country, I am sure," said Marcus.

"Fashion should not be stressed in these times as too terribly important. It won't win the war—but personal appearance can make it easier on us as we win the war."

The clinic ended with a preview of 42 spring and summer clothes, emphasis on nonpriority materials. Navy Department girls served as models—clothes direct from New York, makeup and suntan direct from Elizabeth Arden. Mademoiselle's editor in chief, Betsey Talbot Blackwell; its Midwest editor, Kay Long, and Marion Owens, employe counselor of the Bureau of Ordnance, also spoke.

2 States Move To Hold President To 8-Year Tenure

Lansing, Mich., March 12 (AP).—The Republican-dominated State Senate today adopted a concurrent resolution petitioning Congress to initiate a constitutional amendment to forbid any President of the United States more than two terms of four years each.

Des Moines, Iowa, March 12 (AP).—The overwhelmingly Republican Iowa House of Representatives adopted a resolution today asking Congress to initiate a constitutional amendment limiting the tenure of office "of any President of the United States to two terms of four years each." The vote was 88 to 8.

Here's the Official OPA List Of Rationed, Unrationed Food

The following is the official OPA list of foods that will and will not be included in the rationing program covering meats, cheeses, edible fats and oils and canned fish.

These foods will be rationed:

1. Meats, including all fresh, frozen, smoked, and cured beef, veal, lamb, and pork.

All meat and meat products in containers of tin or glass.

All dried meats.

Variety meats, including tongues, brains, hearts, liver, tripe, sweetbreads, kindeys.

Bouillion cubes, beef extracts, and similar concentrates.

All dry, semidry, and fresh, smoked, and cooked sausage, including salami, pork sausage, baked loaves, wieners, scrapple, souse, head cheese, and others.

Suet, cod and other fats.

2. Fish. All fish, shellfish, and fish products in heremetically sealed containers.

3. Fats and oils, butter, margarine, lard, shortening, cooking and salad oils.

4. Cheese: Cheeses of all kinds except those expressly excluded.

Rationed cheeses include the following:

Cheddar (American), Swiss, brick, munster, limburger, dehydrated grated, club, gouda, edam, smoked, (Italian) all hard, (Greek) varieties, processed cheese, cheese foods.

Cheese products containing 30 per cent or more by weight of rationed cheeses.

The following foods are not rationed:

1. Fish—Fresh fish, frozen fish, smoked, salt, picked fish.

2. Poultry and game—All poultry hermetically sealed.

Fish in containers that are not and game, whether fresh, frozen, or in cans or glass.

3. Fats and oils—Olive oil when not blended with other ingredients.

Salad dressings and mayonnaise.

4. Cheeses—Soft or perishable cheeses such as:

Cream cheese, neufchatel, cottage, pot, baker's, camembert, liederkranz, brie, blue.

Cheese spreads made with a base of cheese which is not rationed.

Red Stamps Good for Meat March 27

may be "frozen" before rationing begins. "In no event, however, will there be a 'freeze' of sales of meats," the OPA said.

About 150 Meat Items

Point values for the newly rationed foods will be stated on a per-pound basis, the OPA announced yesterday, and there will be approximately 150 meat items on the official table, with a separate chart of about 60 types and cuts for Kosher stores. Cheese, fats and oils, and canned fish will be listed on the meat chart.

Meat cuts having a large amount of fat and bone in general will have lower values than those cuts completely edible. For example, the OPA said, lamb neck, pork spare ribs and other cuts heavy with bone will have point values much lower than lean chuck or round steak.

Perishability of commodities also will be taken into account so that point values of brains, kidneys, and liver will be low to avoid possibility of spoilage.

During first two weeks of the rationing, retail distributors will have a "point holiday" in which to build up a "working capital" of points. They will not be required to surrender points collected from customers to wholesalers and distributors from whom they buy. In May, both wholesalers and retailers will register with local OPA boards and be given an "allowable inventory" stated in points.

Separate Table for Dealers

Dealers will have a separate table of "trade" point values which will range up to 20 per cent lower than consumer point values—to allow for trimming, waste, and shrinkage. If customers wish to buy wholesale cuts at "trade" point values and take their chances with trimming and shrinkage, they will be free to do so.

The rationing plan makes no provision for pet rations, and by order of Food Administrator Wickard none of the rationed meats may be used in the manufacture of dog foods.

Farmers and their families are not restricted in the amount of foods raised by themselves and used on their own tables. However, they receive their full quota of points—and the Government is requesting they retain red stamps from their family books equal to the point value of any of the rationed foods, including meat produced on the farm and eaten at home.

When a farmer sells any of his home-produced meat or other rationed products he becomes a distributor and must collect the appropriate amount of stamps.

Senate Passes $6,280,000,000 Deficiency Bill

The Senate passed and returned to the House yesterday a $6,280,000,000 deficiency appropriations bill after a coalition of Republicans and Democrats blocked efforts to include funds for a high school victory corps and for the care of children of working mothers.

The Senate wrote into the measure a provision appropriating $1,200,000 for the care of infants born to wives of enlisted men in the armed forces.

The measure carried four billion dollars in cash and $2,173,000,000 in contract authority for the Maritime Commission to finance the construction of 2161 additional cargo ships.

OPA Racing To Ease Ceiling On Vegetables

By Lint Burkett

Post Staff Writer

Mr. and Mrs. Washington yesterday faced the necessity of tightening their belts over the weekend as large chain grocers and market operators reported a real shortage of most of the staple foods, while OPA officials were working against time to effect a rise in ceiling prices on the perishables, or green groceries.

Low ceiling prices are blamed for the dearth of cabbages and other green foods. Famine is blamed for the scarcity of potatoes.

Ceiling prices again are blamed for the shortage of meat.

One large chain store was without a cut of beef in any of its stores as, it said, two carloads consigned to the chain had become "lost" and officials did not know where they was without beef late in the day. were without beef late in the day. None had any stocks of pork.

Very small stocks of asparagus, red cabbages, celery, cauliflower, carrots, lettuce, water cress, wax beans, tomatoes, string beans, green peas, collards, kale and cucumbers were seen on the stalls at Center Market, Fifth and K Streets Northwest.

Stall operators there said they had been unable to buy any potatoes yesterday but had been promised a few today. Typical was the case of one operator who said he had ordered 50 bushels of greens, and had been told he might be able to get 20. They were being rationed where dealers had them.

While storekeepers were fighting anxiously to maintain their stocks of the staple foods, Haword Lerch, vice president of the Mazo-Lerch Co., Terminal Building, came forward with the suggestion that point values on frozen foods be reduced in order to ease the situation.

He supplies hotels, restaurants and other institutions, but said that at the present rate of sale he had sufficient stocks of spinach to last for one year, enough lima beans to last three years, and other stocks comparable to them. He said he was short on peas, and some other vegetables, however.

In relation to the ceiling price, which dealers say was fixed so low for the Washington area that producers find it more profitable to send their products elsewhere, it was pointed out that cabbage ceilings permitted a price of $2.75 per hamper here whereas other places were allowed to pay $3.15.

Kale, which is not on the rationed list, has jumped from 50 cents a hamper to $4, a chain store reported.

The same store said it received a carload of potatoes Thursday and had sold it out completely within one hour after it had reached the stores. However, an additional supply of potatoes is expected by Monday.

Antipication of rationing of fats and shortening has resulted in heavy runs on these food necessities and in consequence shelves are bare.

OPA Renews Corn Ceiling Price

The Office of Price Administration yesterday imposed permanent dollars-and-cents prices on corn at approximately the same ceiling levels set temporarily in January.

Prices announced for the country's biggest farm crop, the agency said, represent 100 per cent of parity when AAA payments to farmers are taken into account.

The Senate has disapproved the method of counting in Government payments when setting parity prices for farm commodities. The House is expected to approve next week a bill adready through the Senate prohibiting the inclusion of such payments.

If passed, this measure would make mandatory a raise to $1.08 a bushel at Chicago for No. 2 yellow corn—a grade on which OPA yesterday placed a maximum price of $1.02.

Tax Returns Here Ahead of Last Year

Citizens Crowd Revenue Bureau With 2 Days to Go

Time's a'wastin' for Washingtonians who haven't yet paid their income taxes to Uncle Sam.

Two more days remain in which to file returns at the local office of the Washington division in the Revenue Building, Twelfth Street and Constitution Avenue—today, 8:15 a. m. to 6 p. m., and Monday, 8:15 a. m. to midnight; or mail them to the Collector of Internal Revenue, Baltimore, Md.

After that, the 5 per cent penalty for every 30-day period of delinquency in filing becomes effective.

A. Parks Rasin, administrative assistant in charge of the Washington division, reported yesterday that daily returns this week are running between 2000 and 4000 over a comparable period last year; but even so, he said, his office is handling all comers, and people who don't file before midnight Monday won't be able to blame anything but their own procrastination.

"If they'll just come down, we'll be able to take care of them in time," he declared.

With an office force of 264 persons on duty—about 50 per cent more than last year—Rasin gave these figures of returns for this week: yesterday, 11,502 (approximate); Thursday, 12,006; Wednesday, 11,287; Tuesday, 12,398; Monday, 9123. The same period this time last year: Thursday, 8506; Wednesday, 8913; Tuesday, 8625; Monday, 7704.

Building guards, striving to keep liines in order and answer a million questions, have had a few bright moments: A Chinese, thinking the person standing nearby was a Jap, took one hefty swing and was ready to follow up with a beating until he learned, to his embarrassment, that the man was a fellow Chinese. Then there was the fellow who owed something like $70, was told he could pay it by quarters, and calmly walked over to the cashier's cage and left a two-bit piece. Finally, there was the elderly woman who wanted to know where she could pay her "come come" taxes.

For Wives, Babies

Senate Votes Servicemen Family Aid

An appropriation of $1,200,000 for emergency maternity and infant care for the wives and babies of enlisted men and noncommissioned officers in the armed services was passed by the Senate yesterday as an amendment to the four-billion-dollar deficiency appropriation bill.

The amendment, introduced by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat) Nevada, provides that the Children's Bureau allot the funds which will be administered under State health agencies. McCarran said the bill was designed to aid those wives who follow their husbands to training camps and are without funds and far from their friends and families when in need of maternity care.

Amendments Killed

At the same time the Senate killed two amendments introduced by Carl Hayden (Democrat), Arizona. One provided an appropriation of $2,884,000 to the Office of Defense, Health and Welfare Services for wartime care of children of employed mothers. The other amendment would have given the Office of Education two allotments, one of $2,390,000 for preparation of high school students for wartime services and one of $678,000 for organization of high school victory corps.

The amendments were dropped by Hayden on protest of Minority Leader McNary (Republican) of Oregon) who insisted that they should be referred to a legislative committee for consideration before being brought to the Senate floor. When it became apparent that insistence upon consideration of the amendments would delay action upon the entire deficiency bill, Hayden withdrew.

Hayden Introduces Bills

Later Hayden introduced bills covering exactly the same ground as the amendments, which were referred to the Senate Committee of Education and Labor.

McNary said that until July 1 there were ample funds to handle the Nation-wide child care program.

The funds now being used for child care programs come under the Lanham Act and are administered by the Federal Works Agency. An allocation of $13,125 was made Thursday to the District by Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, FWA administrator, for the first of a series of nursery schools in Washington. This school will be located at 310-320 D Street Southwest.

Senator John A. Danaher (Republican), Connecticut, opposing the amendment on child care, declared that under the Lanham Act 17 million dollars was now available for child care. He said rejection of the amendment was in no sense a rejection of a program for the care of children of mothers working in war industries.

Rejection of the child-care amendment by the Senate was in line with the action of the House which threw out of the appropriations bill the same appropriation for the Office of Defense Health and Welfare. That agency and FWA have some time been waging a battle to gain control of administering the Nation-wide child-care program.

ing levy, and the amounts collected by it would be applied against the income of 1944.

Schedule of Discounts

Starting in 1944, this schedule of discounts would be established for full payment of the tax against the current year's income:

Those who paid the 1944 tax in full by March 15, 1944, would get a 4 per cent discount, those who paid in full by June 15 would receive the 3 per cent discount, those who paid up by September 15 would get 2 per cent, and those paying by December 15 would get 1 per cent. The September and December discounts would be available this year for those paying off the tax on 1943 income in those months.

Under the Ways and Means collection system, the taxpayer is reserved his present right to remain a full year behind in his income levy payments. If he elects to ignore the discount, he can pay only his first two quarterly installments, the first next Monday, and the second June 15. The withholding collection device, planned for July 1, would become mandatory for wage and salary earners.

It would be geared to collect the net Victory tax, and the levy on taxable income in the first surtax bracket. Three parts of the 20 per cent rate would apply to income over the basic Victory tax exemption of $624 a year. The other 17 parts of the 20 per cent would go to collect income taxes on the amount of wages and salaries above these exemptions; $550 a year for single persons, $1320 a year for married, and $385 for each dependent.

The committee also voted to extend from April 21 to September 15, the time within which corporations may petition for adjustments under the relief provisions of the excess profits tax.

President's Power Over Salaries Curbed in House Vote

be defeated. If the House gets another chance to deal with the salary-debt bill, it appeared likely Administration strategists would accept one of the other plans.

Provision Added

Without a compromise, some members hinted during debate and predicted after the vote that the President would vote legislation containing the Disney plan—even the debt limit increase bill which will be needed within about two weeks to continue war financing—and seek a test of strength on the salary issue.

Disney's plan adds to the Price Control Act of last October, upon which the President issued his economic stabilization order including the salary limitation, this new proviso:

"No action shall be taken under authorization of this act, or otherwise, which will limit the payment of annual salaries to a maximum amount less than the greater of the following: (1) The annual rate of salary paid to such employe on December 7, 1941; or (2) an amount which after reduction by the Federal income taxes thereon would equal $25,000."

What this would mean in operation was a main issue in debate. So was the meaning of the Price Control Act of last October. But the question apparently to the fore on the final vote was what the President meant by ordering the salary limitation.

The President, thundered Disney, had as much right "as the Queen of Sheba" to impose a salary ceiling, and called on the House to be "tough-minded" and meet the issue squarely of whether Congress had ever delegated "extraordinary" power over salaries.

From the other side of the aisle, Representative Wolcott declered "There is only one issue—whether Congress shall legislate or these bureaus shall legislate." Representative Ditter (Republican) of Pennsylvania renewed the claim that the President's salary-limit figure was lifted from the Communist Party platform, and said it represented a philosophy which would "make the temple at Monticello a shrine for Karl Marx."

Ditter said this philosophy was being espoused by Representative Cooper (Democrat) of Tennessee, when the latter moved to send the Disney plan back to committee.

Cooper, veteran in Congress, and veteran of the last war, drawled to Ditter "You're just telling something that's not so."

Majority Leader McCormack of Massachusetts called Ditter's comments "an unfair attack on a great legislator," then urged that the whole salary question be sent back to the Ways and Means Committee to be taken up as a tax matter.

At that point the substitute plans for Disney's were before the House. They were turned down in order, by these votes: Smith, lost 173 to 80; Wolcott, 187 to 126; and Gearhart, 190 to 126.

1250 Serbs Killed In Two Massacres, Yugoslavs Say

London, March 12 (AP).—The Yugoslav government in exile said today the Germans had executed 1250 Serb hostages in Belgrade alone in two recent massacres, apparently in fear of an Allied invasion of the Balkans.

A high church dignitary, Archpriest Makarije Miletic, 71, and a noted Serb writer, Dr. Milovoj Popovic, were listed among the slain. A Belgrade newspaper, without specifying dates, said 400 had been slain in the town of Pozarevac and 200 others deported.

Yugoslav officials said reports from Belgrade showed the Germans were afraid that the capital was gradually filling with Gen. Draja Mihailovic's men and other organized patriots and therefore were shooting everybody "under the slightest suspicion."

A Prague dispatch to the Swiss newspaper Der Neue Tag said six persons had been put to death in Prague, Czechoslovakia, on charges of making weapons, working against the Reich and high treason.

3 Youths Held After Siphoning Gas From Auto

Three youths, 16, 17 and 18 were held for investigation last night after two policemen caught them in the act of siphoning gasoline from an automobile near the French Embassy early yesterday.

An automobile the trio was using had been stolen Thursday night and in their possession was found a blackjack, a piece of pipe and a sock containing a doorknob.

Policemen A. J. Costello and C. J. Williams, detailed to the French Embassy, said they watched the boys as they approached the car parked near Twenty-third Street and Kalorama Road, and seized them while they worked the siphon. A gallon can and a length of rubber home were confiscated.

The automobile was identified as belonging to Maxin R. Armagnac, 4884 MacArthur Boulevard Northwest. It had been stolen from a parking lot at Sixth and G Streets Northwest.

Mexican Volcano In Action Again

Uruapan, Mexico, March 12 (AP). A government geological commission reported today that the Parangaricutiro Volcano had blasted open two new craters in the 700-foot cone formed last month.

The new activity began yesterday and followed two weeks of comparative calm. A member of the commission said lava now covered an area of 6000 square yards to a depth of 6 feet.

Many Warworkers in Cleveland Refuse to File Tax Returns

Cleveland, March 12.—Thousands of war-plant workers in the Cleveland area are assuming a "come-and-get-me" attitude toward the income tax collector, Frank F. Gentsch, collector of internal revenue, declared today.

With the number of returns to date showing a decrease of 30 per cent from the same period last year, Gentsch said lawyers touring war plants to aid workers in filling out income-tax forms reported a rebellious undercurrent.

"They tell me," Gentsch revealed, "that thousands of workers, approached on the matter of making out returns, have refused point blank. They have replied: 'Let the Government come and get me; I'm not going to file.'

"There is only one thing left to us in those cases. That is to gather up the evidence and take it to the United States attorney. Those who willfully refuse to file returns or who willfully fail to pay their taxes are liable to a fine up to $10,000 or imprisonment of from 1 to 10 years, or both. Besides, we can place a lien against their property and their wages and collect.

"We are not anxious to put people in jail, but if they will not obey the law there is no alternative."

The internal revenue collector said his information had come from attorneys for industrial concerns who had been asked by the companies to help employes make out tax forms. Gentsch said he knew of no reason for the workers' attitude reported by the lawyers.

The latest figures in the Cleveland office show 277,365 returns received up to Wednesday, a decrease of 119,106 for the comparable 1942 period.

"That decrease is even worse than it appears on the surface," Gentsch said. He explained that 907,000 filed last year, while lowered exemptions and the increase in workers' numbers was expected to boost the number who should file this year to 1,500,000.

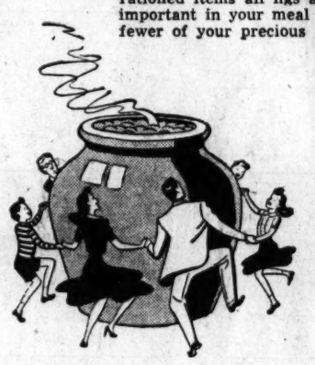
POINT VALUES REDUCED ON THESE FOODS!

OPA has announced a reduction in point values of DRY BEANS, PEAS and LENTILS; DRIED and DEHYDRATED PRUNES and RAISINS, and have removed from the list of rationed items all figs and dates not hermetically sealed. These foods are now doubly important in your meal planning because they are high in nutritive value and now require fewer of your precious points.



Here's a Baked Bean Recipe You'll Like

2 cups dried navy beans
½ lb. salt pork
1 large onion
1 tbsp. molasses
2 tsps. salt
¾ tsp. dry mustard
6 tbsps. tomato catsup
4 tbsps. brown sugar

Pick over and wash beans. Cook slowly in water to cover in 3 to 4 qt. kettle, covered, until tender, about 2 hours, adding more water if needed to keep beans covered with liquid. Drain off bean liquid into small bowl. Place salt pork in bottom of deep baking pan or 2½-qt. bean crock. Add beans. Insert slices of onion. Mix remaining ingredients with bean liquid and pour over beans. Cover and bake in a moderate over (350° F.) about 4 hours or until well browned, removing cover last hour of baking. Add more water if beans become dry during baking. Serves 6 to 8.

NOTE: If salt pork is not available substitute 4 tbsps. bacon drippings combined with liquid mixture. Other kinds of beans may be used as limas, pink, or kidney beans.

Ginsburg Record Clear, Data Shows

Foreseeing Attack, OPA Counsel Sent Resignation to Brown in January

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

David Ginsburg, general counsel for OPA, whose selective service record was bitterly attacked in the House Thursday, foresaw in January that he might be called a "draft-dodger" and submitted an "unqualified" resignation to OPA Chief Prentiss Brown, it was revealed yesterday.

Rising to the defense of Ginsburg in the Senate yesterday, Senator Hill (Democrat) of Alabama, read into the record Ginsburg's letter of resignation and a statement of his selective service record.

And Senator Barkley of Kentucky, Democratic leader, said that a commission as a lieutenant or captain was not sought by Ginsburg but was offered to him because of his ability.

Submitting his resignation, Ginsburg warned Brown of possible attack. He wrote:

"I combine in myself almost every handicap that can be brought to an important public office in a war agency in January, 1943. I am a New Deal Democrat; I am a Jew, and I am young—31 in April. As a result of my youth, incidentally, I shall almost certainly be attacked as a draft dodger. This would hurt me fearfully, and hurt many others who are unknown to me. Only the President can forestall this, but it is doubtful whether he would choose to do so."

Meaning Is Vague

Hill did not explain the last sentence, nor did the full text of the letter amplify it, but it is generally taken to mean that the granting of a commission would have removed the possibility of attack.

The paragraph explaining Ginsburg's own interpretation of his vulnerability to attack was preceded by a general warning of the difficulties facing the OPA administrator himself.

Ginsburg wrote:

"Your job is tougher even than you believe . . . Directly or indirectly, sooner or later, every organized special interest and pressure group in the country will bring its power to bear on you—first by what will appear to be appeals to reason, then by threats, and if need be by force. Every decision which affects them adversely will come to be challenged before you or Congress or the public as a threat to the war effort or the public interest perpetrated by a "college professor" or an "inexperienced young lawyer." The adjectives and the epithets may change as the character of the staff changes, but so long as the ruling remains adverse the challenge will also remain. They will try to divide you from your staff, and then try to undermine you and your staff separateley. As a symbol of OPA, and in order to preserve the loyalty and support of your people, it will be your obligation to defend them as you defend yourself, it will be harder because you will have inherited the organization."

Hill declared that Ginsburg had never requested a deferment for himself on the basis of his occupation, and stated that the requests had come from former OPA Chief Leon Henderson.

Pointing out that Ginsburg was married with a dependent wife, Hill said he would have been deferred until very recently without any requests from Henderson.

"In my opinion such requests were never necessary and need not have been made," Hill said.

Putting into the record the status of Ginsburg under Selective Service, Hill showed that in his questionnaire in 1941, Ginsburg indicated dependency. On August 16, Ginsburg was classified II-A by his local board, Board 10, instead of the expected III-A for dependency. On the same date the OPA asked deferment of Ginsburg as a necessary man. Henderson asked classification of Ginsburg as II-B on January 15, 1942, according to Hill's record. On January 19 the local board placed Ginsburg in class I-A, subject to a physical examination. On March 6, of that year, however, the local board placed Ginsburg in class II-A, with a six-months deferment.

Put in 3-B

On September 3, 1942, Henderson asked deferment of Ginsburg in Class II-B. On September 24, 1942, the local board put Ginsburg in Class III-B, his present classification.

Earlier in the day Representative Costello (Democrat) of California, chairman of the House Military Affairs Subcommittee which is investigating draft deferments in the Federal service, said that the Ginsburg case was not closed so far as the committee was concerned.

"We will watch with interest to see what happens," he said. "Ginsburg is definitely subject to reclassification in 1-A." Costello added that Ginsburg should be classified at once and inducted into the Army, adding that it was "at least evident" that Ginsburg was no longer an essential employe so far as OPA is concerned.

Costello added that he was awaiting more information from OPA on employes of draft age.

despite insufficient supplies.

"The great problem is in transporting our material from the United States to the battle fronts," he explained. "Naturally fighting equipment is given first priorities on ships, and often even necessities must be given second consideration. Our supplies are waiting at ports here for shipment and gradually are being sent abroad, but early in the North African campaign our workers faced many handicaps.

Showed Old Film

"Still they managed to do their job—that is, to take worries from the shoulders of Army heads and provide soldiers with recreation. In one town, for example, the Red Cross was given a place to show movies but there was only one film available—'Gold Diggers of 1932.' Finally they decided to show it anyway, and because many of our boys are too young to remember it, it was a tremendous hit.

"We aren't satisfied with giving them such outdated entertainment, but it did fill in a gap. Another important item our workers try to provide is toothbrushes, which don't seem to have much significance until you are unable to buy them.

"Our field directors are with troops from Casablanca to Tunis, living under the same conditions and rendering extraordinary service."

is not probable that such offense would have been committed if society had provided, as it unquestionably should, proper machinery for the supervision and regulation of those working in the delicate and vital field of the placement of children in homes other than those of relatives. This field of work, which requires of those engaged in it much more than simply the inclination to do the work, has been left thus far simply to those who have the inclination. This is in no small part responsible for your difficulties.

"In view of this, the sentence of the court is four months to a year and a day and a fine of $120. The execution of the penitentiary sentence of four months to a year and a day is suspended and the defendant is placed on probation as to that, conditioned, in addition to the usual conditions of probation upon restitution, through the probation office, of $50 to the mother of the child, $100 to the adopting parents, and the payment of the bill of the attending doctor for services rendered to the mother.

Orders Fine Paid at Once

"The fine of $120 is to be paid forthwith or the defendant will be committed until such time as it is paid, or she is otherwise released in accordance with law."

Huff's comments in recommending reintroduction of the licensing bill were:

"As the matter now stands in the District, any person or organization can act to interest persons in the removal of children from parents and to place them with adoptive parents. The public has no protection to its sense of security.

"The bill provides an authority representing the public, composed of persons whose responsibility, experience and training makes them qualified to judge what is and what is not safe practice for the infants, juveniles and parents concerned. It appears to be significant that the bill has become known popularly as 'the baby broker bill.' Real estate brokers are licensed; so are cosmetologists, physicians, truckers and many others. This is done to give the public assurance that a safe standard of skill and practice is possessed by the licensee.

"The public, as well as the children and parents concerned, is entitled to protection by licensure as provided in this bill to insure that those who concern themselves with the disposition of children's lives be persons or organizations who can be recognized and approved and licensed by a responsible body and authority.

"The District cannot ignore the implications of brokerages in babies. Babies and parents should not remain at the mercy of anyone who directly or indirectly uses them as a commodity for exchange."

United States Attorney Edward M. Curran and his assistant, George McNeil, who prosecuted the Collins case, brought out testimony during the trial to show that Mrs. Collins had received $270 from a Washington couple and that she had failed to apply the money for the purposes for which it had been paid.

Testimony was to the effect that Mrs. Collins met the couple last fall and agreed to furnish them a baby at some future date. At that time she was paid $50 by the couple for the board and room of the unwed girl who was to have the baby.

Senate Plans Its Own Postwar Study

make its own planning arrangements, but Senator Barkley made it clear to reporters that George's resolution contemplated study of all economic plans, private as well as those made by Government agencies of which the board is one.

Is Up to Congress

Speaking to his regular Friday press conference two days after sending to Congress the board's programs for cradle-to-the-grave extension of social security benefits and for Government-industry partnerships, Mr. Roosevelt declared that it was up to Congress to see that the Nation should have ready plans for public works when the armed forces are demobilized at the end of the war.

Thus far, he said, Congress has made available only enough money for preparation of specifications and engineering surveys covering one billion dollars out of a seven-billion-dollar program. The President explained that most of the engineering planning is not yet finished and will require six months to a year to complete.

Congress must decide whether the country will have a great hiatus without any jobs, except on paper, or whether it is going to have jobs ready to start, Mr. Roosevelt said.

The vice chairman of the board, Dr. Charles E. Merriam of Chicago, and one of its members, George F. Yantis of Olympia, Wash., were quoted as telling reporters, after a White House conference, that they had discussed continuing the work of social and economic planning, regardless of whether Congress continued the board.

Mr. Roosevelt's discussion was restricted to the question of public works jobs for returning soldiers. He observed that one billion dollars does not employ very many people and that more than legislative action is required to start new work. A Federal agency handling work projects must be prepared to let contracts so that the dirt can be flying in two or three weeks, if long delays are to be avoided, he said.

Senator Barkley said the special Senate committee would give "great and careful" study to the planning board's report, but explained that it would receive for examination all information on the subject.

Sliding Scale

The question as to whether the sliding-scale plan of adjusting electric power rates should be abolished calls for exhaustive study. We would not want to pass judgment upon that proposal by the Treasury without a very careful weighing of all the pros and cons. But one argument which is being made for abandonment of the so-called sliding scale is obviously haywire. Thurman Hill, attorney for the Treasury, brought in evidence designed to show that the cost of power to the public might have been reduced 24 million dollars since 1924. The rate reductions ordered under the sliding scale actually amounted to $8,844,044.

Mr. Hill's estimate of possible savings appears to include all of the power company's earnings above the initial or basic rate of return stated in the sliding-scale plan. Now the essence of the sliding-scale device is that it rewards the utility company for economies effected in operations from year to year. If a utility is merely allowed to earn a fixed rate, it has little incentive to keep its cost of operations down. For the last 18 years the Public Utilities Commission has clung to the theory that it is better to induce the company to make every feasible saving than to try to keep expenses down by regulation alone. That plan has produced many rate reductions, though it has also yielded large profits to the company.

Savings to the public might have been larger if the company had been held down to a fixed rate of return. But it is certainly rash to assume that all of the so-called "excess earnings" would have been passed along to the public. Without any incentive in the form of increased earnings, Pepco would probably have been far less vigilant in cutting its operating costs. Mr. Hill is simply assuming that we can have our cake and eat it too.

The Worst Yet

The most serious criticism that could be brought against the Ruml plan is the intellectual demoralization that it has created among our best legislative minds. Proof of the sad state to which prolonged discussion of the Ruml plan has reduced the Ways and Means Committee is afforded by the lastest and worst substitute for pay-as-you-go. The committee has voted to drop all attempts to put taxpayers on a current basis. Instead, beginning next July, it proposes to deduct 20 per cent from all wages and salaries at the source. Although this withholding tax will be computed as a percentage of current income, the taxpayer will still be discharging liabilities accrued against 1942 incomes. In other words, the end of the year will find him still owing taxes in full against this year's income, unless he happens to have made overpayments. In that case the excess payments will be credited against income taxes due next year on 1943 incomes.

The proposed 20 per cent withholding tax will also capture income from individuals who are not liable to taxes on their 1942 incomes. This group will be permitted to credit 1943 payments against next year's tax liabilities on incomes of 1943. In other words, they will begin next July to pay income taxes that would not normally be due until March 1944.

From the Treasury's viewpoint this withholding tax plan has the double advantage of anticipating tax receipts and making sure that would-be tax dodgers are caught. But the complicated nature of the levy is calculated to make the taxpayer hold his bewildered head in his hands and wonder dully how he can adjust his spending to unexpected demands of this kind. Of course, none of the advantages of putting taxpayers on a current basis (the main purpose of the Ruml plan) would be realized, while the withholding tax would be a hybrid plan, exacting advance tax payments from an estimated four million taxpayers—those who had no taxable 1942 income.

The committee gives all taxpayers an option of getting on a current-payment basis by suggesting that they pay all their quarterly installments on last year's taxes during the first half of this year, plus the 20 per cent withholding tax for the last six months. It would be an interesting study in abnormal psychology to fathom the mental processes of the taxpayers who accept this generous offer to double their tax payments during the second half of the current year just to free themselves of tax liabilities that will not catch up with them until they die and their heirs are called upon to pay accrued taxes.

Ramspeck Inquiry

An inquiry that may have a far-reaching influence upon the future of government in the United States has been launched by the House Civil Service Investigating Committee. Because of the hoarding of manpower by some governmental agencies and the gross inefficiency of others, the committee would serve a useful purpose if it merely exposed lax personnel management. But it has a much bigger job than that. Its real assignment is to rescue the Government from the confusion and waste motion that are now acting as a drag upon our war effort.

Roughly 75 per cent of the money spent on Government goes for personnel. That fact alone indicates the importance of systematic personnel management. Yet it is common knowledge that such management in the Government service is the exception rather than the rule. A few agencies, of which the Navy Department and the Lend-Lease Administration are outstanding examples, are trying to do their work efficiently with a minimum of trained employes. The great majority of Federal agencies are spending money for personnel with the abandon of the proverbial drunken sailor. When every allowance for the haste, the excitement and extraordinary pressures of war has been made, there remains the dangerous fact that time, energy and taxpayers' money are being wasted by hiring policies that are far removed from the best-known practice.

We hope that Chairman Ramspeck of the investigating committee will fully explore the causes and consequences of these policies. The mere fact that the hearing has gotten under way seems to have had a salutary effect. Both the WPB and the OPA have arrested their haphazard growth, and the Budget Bureau is reported to be studying methods of curbing the hiring of all Federal agencies. But this is merely a negative approach. The real test of the committee will come in its efforts to put system into the confusion that now exists.

On the Senate side of the Capitol the problem is being attacked in a wholly destructive way. The McKellar bill would not eliminate any of the tangle in which many of the war agencies have become involved. Rather it would create another level to the muddled system through which employes are added to the Federal payroll. So it remains for the Ramspeck Committee to take the lead toward rehabilitating the merit system.

There is no lack of sound personnel policy, so far as theory and principle are concerned. But there is an appalling lack of application of theories and principles that are known to be sound. Long ago, for example, the President ordered all departments and independent agencies to appoint personnel directors to function in close association with the agency head. Only a few personnel directors have been given the status this order contemplated. Equally serious is the failure to provide standards of personnel administration applicable to all the numerous segments of this vast Government. Nor has there been any real decentralization of responsibility when regional and local offices have been established. As a result, the appointment of new employes and the ironing out of personnel problems have been forced through a bottleneck in Washington. In these circumstances the Civil Service Commission either had to relax its standards and surrender its function or leave vital war agencies crippled for want of personnel. It chose the former course.

There would be little point in casting epithets because of the unfortunate results of this breakdown in civil service standards. But there is a point of the greatest significance in the inauguration of an efficient personnel system. The Government is now employing approximately three million men and women. Waste, confusion and lost motion in such a vast establishment is a menace to our democratic form of government. For the clamor for dictatorial methods usually arises out of the failure of democratic institutions to function with reasonable effectiveness. If the Ramspeck Committee attacks its problem with the object of making big Government work efficiently, its inquiry will probably stand out as one of the great events of 1943.

Russian Pendulum

Since last summer the military pendulum has swung backward and forward in great arcs. When the Russian drive on Kharkov, lost to the Nazis the previous year, petered out, the Nazis went ahead with their own offensive. This led them, finally, to the left bank of the Volga, and to a point deep in the heart of the northern Caucasus. In November the pendulum began to swing back. Not only was Stalingrad relieved, with the besieging army of around 330,000 men finally cut off and liquidated by the Russians, but the Red army swept on to the west, retaking Rostov, Kharkov, Kursk and Rzhev.

In the central sector the momentum of the Red drive shows no signs of diminishing. Latest reports place the Russian forces within a few miles of Orel, the capture of which would give the Russians uninterrupted control of the railroad running south from Moscow to a point below Kharkov. Thus they would be enabled to launch a counteroffensive against the German forces in the Donets region. So the future of the latest German drive toward Kharkov, Vorovshilovgrad and Rostov may depend to a major degree on what now happens at Orel.

In the meantime the Donets struggle should put an end to the idea that Germany is at the end of her rope or near it. The fact that after the fearful punishment she received last fall and early this winter, on top of the attrition produced by the previous year of war, Germany was able to launch so large-scaled a counteroffensive in the south proves that her power is far from spent. To be sure, it was of the most vital importance to the Nazis to prevent the Red army from reaching the Dnieper and thus coming within air range of the Rumanian oil fields. For that reason Hitler may have found it necessary to throw into the battle reserves he was saving up for this summer's offensive. Given that readiness to use such reserves, he was able to capitalize the advantage he enjoys in possessing uninterrupted railroad communications to the front, something which the Russians do not possess. But taking all factors into account, it is clear that while the Russians have made a deep dent in the German armor, they have not yet broken it. A hard, bitter fight still lies ahead.

Postwar Planning

The voluminous report of the National Resources Planning Board has created a furor out of all proportion to the cause. Comment has ranged from denunciation of committee recommendations as socialistic propaganda to complaints that the proposals are not sufficiently specific and the costs of the outlined program unknown.

It is surprising that an executive report of this type should be seriously discussed as if it were a final pattern for a postwar legislative program. Careful reading of the message accompanying the report indicates that the President regards it primarily as a useful tool "to assist the Congress in the development and consideration of appropriate legislation to achieve normal employment, to give assurance for all our people against common economic hazards and to provide for the development of our national resources." If this very broad indorsement is not sufficiently reassuring, Senator George's plan for setting up a bipartisan congressional committee to study postwar conditions ought to allay fears that the report will be made a basis for legislative action.

Congress is no longer the docile legislative body that meekly accepted ready-made programs laid down for it by executive agencies. It has again taken the initiative in formulating legislation important for the conduct of war. And it shows signs of a new and welcome aggressiveness in grappling with the problems of the postwar period. It would be foolishly premature for Congress to take any definite action now on most of the matters with which the National Resources Planning Committee report deals. But it is extremely important for it to try to envisage the condition that may prevail after the war and to weigh alternative plans for dealing with them.

Legislative policies that might be unacceptable under one set of conditions might be perfectly adapted to a different set of conditions. Hence it is necessary to approach postwar legislative planning with an open mind. To assume, for instance, that the regulatory fetters on industry resulting from war can be removed as soon as peace is declared would be foolhardy. To plan for a future in which those restraints had become a permanent legacy of war would likewise be stupid.

With a war of indefinite duration to fight, and with the terms of the peace in the lap of the gods, we cannot possibly foresee the extent of our postwar commitments. But it is none too soon for Congress to formulate the general objectives of the postwar reconstruction period. The report of the National Resources Planning Board does not imply acceptance of its conclusions, but a study of its findings will stimulate thinking. That is what we most need at the present time.

WILLOW WHISTLES

Where are you now, young boy of the willow whistle,
Where are you, boy?
Have you forgotten that thickets of willow are waiting
To bring you joy?

Have you forgotten searching among the branches
For the right size
Of stick that you could fashion into a whistle
That you would prize?

Have you forgotten pounding and soaking the willow
Till bark came loose?
Can you remember the taste of the willow's tender
Succulent juice?

Do you remember cutting the careful notches
Into the wood,
Notches measured and fashioned to make a whistle
Sound as it should?

Have you forgotten that last proper fitting together
Of wood and bark,
And piping notes that to your young ears sounded
Sweet as the lark?

Where are you now, young boy of the willow whistle,
When everywhere
Thickets of tender willow are waiting—are you
Too old to care?

Our Postwar Designs

Nazis Make Charges

THE CURRENT heavy radio barrage of Axis charges that the United States has dark postwar designs on military bases that have been built in Latin America is only a new version of an old tune. It is in fact not even very new. This writer made files on similar Axis campaigns in Mexico in 1940, when our military agreement with that country was in prospect, in Brazil in late 1941, when the air defense system around the bulge was building and in Ecuador in early 1942 when the question of using the Galapagos Islands as a bottom peg for wider Canal defenses was up.

The Nazis cannot, of course, today hope to sabotage the building of a defense system with this line of attack, as they did then. What they obviously are trying to do is to revive uneasiness. If in doing so, they can slow up the highly cooperative machinery that is drawing enormous streams of raw materials out of Latin America for American and British war factories, they will gain a definite advantage.

Welles Aimed Deflating Blow

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles aimed a deflating blow at this propaganda last Saturday when he pointed out to newsmen that our use of military bases in Latin America is strictly limited to the "present emergency" and that this country has no intention to take any permanent action affecting the territory of any other American republic. But the barrage can be expected to continue. Since the coming presidential campaign has brought this country's postwar policies into the frankest kind of discussion by our public leaders and press, the Nazis will find plenty of tags to hang their propaganda on.

The American people as well as the Latin Americans will grow more and more interested in the future of these bases as time goes on. No matter what may be surmised about this question by the uninformed in this hemisphere or the ill-intentioned in Germany, their future is already clearly outlined by two sets of acts and facts.

The first set is the large body of treaties and conventions that this country has signed with Latin-American nations since 1933 to make good on our "Good Neighbor" promise of equality of treatment. These treaties have been ratified by our Senate and are the law of the land. Equality of treatment means that we strictly respect their sovereignty, territorial or other, and rules out any use of any Latin-American military base without their full consent, now or after the war.

The second is made up of multilateral treaties and other official agreements that the United States and Latin-American nations have made for mutual defense. Through them two major instruments for the direct military defense of the New World have been forged.

The first of these is the system of emergency arrangements like the ones under which the new bases were built and are being used. The American republics agreed to make these arrangements at Havana in 1940. The second is the Inter-American Defense Board.

The Inter-American Defense Board is an advisory council "composed of military and naval technicians appointed by each of the governments," created by resolution at the Rio meetings of American Ministers of Foreign Affairs in early 1942. With members from the armed forces of all the New World republics in attendance, the board began work in Washington on March 30, 1942.

The emergency military agreements and the war plans of the countries that were at war were already operating at that time and took care of special danger areas such as the region of the Panama Canal and Brazil's bulge. The defense board was directed to study and recommend over-all measures for continental defense.

Cooperation Has Paid

In the past year a number of practical results have come out of their work, but details are of course military secrets. They have the establishment of radio-detector stations over the hemisphere to combat spying, the uniform censorship of all communications to or from the hemisphere and the adoption of adequate antisabotage codes in every republic.

More extensive use of the convoy system to meet the submarine threat in hemisphere waters was an early recommendation and a set of precautions to take at dockside was also framed. The board has stressed the need to cut the red tape surrounding the passage of military airplanes from country to country and has mapped plans for a far greater pooling of military air information than had been customary.

It is not the details of their work to date, however, but the fact that this board has been formed and is functioning that is significant. It's greatest implications are for the postwar period. This is a permanent military commission, to continue after the emergency military arrangements have expired. When this time comes, its advisory responsibilities will be heavier. It will be a vital cog of a hemisphere peace machinery that will automatically take care of the question of bases.

Unfortunately for the Nazi hope to keep on using imperialism as a stick to beat us with, military relations within this hemisphere, like political and economic relations, are already firmly set in the cooperative mold. The United States for a period tried the strong-arm formula inherited from Europe in dealing with some of our neighbors and we reaped trouble out of it everywhere. We have led a parade toward cooperation during the past 10 years and we found quick need for friends on the south when we were attacked from Asia and Europe. We are the last Nation that would want to change a trend that has worked so successfully, even if we could.

Germany's Gamble

By Barnet Nover

Tunisia, Russia And Second Front

IN A RECENT interview, Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, supreme Allied naval commander in the North African theater, predicted a "German Dunkerque" for Rommel's army.

But the chances of the Germans getting back to Europe, as the bulk of the British army in France got back safely to England, are slim, Admiral Cunningham said. The Axis lacks the shipping that will be needed to evacuate the 250,000 troops it now has in Tunisia.

We must assume, however, that when the German high command embarked on the Tunisian venture it did so with its eyes open. It must have taken into account the possibility that the move might ultimately involve the sacrifice both of Rommel's Afrika Korps and of the force (now commanded by Gen. Jurgen von Arnim) that was rushed to Tunisia following the Allied landings in French North Africa.

In other words, the German high command, in deciding to make a fight for the last strip of African territory not yet in Allied control, must have gambled on the belief that the long-run gains of the venture would outweigh the immediate costs, great as they are likely to be.

IT IS STILL too early to say whether this gamble was justified.

That will depend on two things: first, the time it will take the Allies to wrest control of Tunisia from the Axis and, second, the extent to which Allied operations in North Africa inhibit or accelerate the opening of a second land front in Europe.

German calculations would seem to be (1) that it will take the Allies a long time to win the Battle of Tunisia and (2) that as long as this battle rages the Allies will be unable to invade the continent of Europe either from the south or from the west.

Both of these calculations may prove to be wrong, in which case Hitler will needlessly have sacrificed a quarter of a million of his best troops, an irreplaceable part of his diminishing Luftwaffe and much material that could better have been held in reserve.

Up to now, however, the Tunisian gamble by the Axis has much to justify it.

PROOF of this is to be found in what has been happening both on the Eastern Front and in Occupied Europe.

Last November, a few days after the Allied landings in North Africa, the Red Army launched a great offensive in the Stalingrad area, along the Don bend and in the Caucasus. The results were spectacular.

Stalingrad was relieved, with the German besieging force of 330,000 destroyed or taken prisoner. The German conquests in the north Caucasus were cut down by three-fourths. Such German strong points as Kursk, Kharkov and Rostov were recaptured by the Russians, who then began to press on toward the Dnieper.

If, at that moment, the Allies could have forced a division of German strength by a large-scale invasion of Europe the Wehrmacht could not have undertaken its recent and successful counteroffensive in the Donets area, a counteroffensive which has now resulted in the recapture of Kharkov.

The limitations of German strength, even without the existence of a second land front, are seen in the circumstances that at the very moment they began to menace Kharkov they had to evacuate from Vyazma.

IN THE MEANTIME, however, the Germans are moving heaven and earth to fortify the coast of Europe and thus make it extremely expensive for the Allies to invade the continent. At the same time they are taking steps to expand their diminishing labor supply by forcibly compelling large numbers of Frenchmen, Dutchmen, Belgians, Czechs and others to take employment in the Reich.

This latter move has a military as well as an economic purpose behind it. To the extent that able-bodied men are withdrawn from Europe's coastal area to that extent will the Allies be deprived of potential recruits for the armies of liberation once a second land front is established in Europe.

ONE EFFECT which labor conscription in Occupied Europe is having is to fan the fires of revolt. This is most clearly evident in France, where, according to reports reaching London, some 600 Germans have been killed by guerillas during the past few weeks.

Too much must not be made of this development, however. For with weather conditions soon likely to make large-scale fighting on the Eastern Front difficult, the Nazis will be able to send to Western Europe enough additional men to maintain order.

Only an actual invasion of Europe can make such guerilla activities by Hitler's subject peoples truly menacing to the Reich. And the longer the opening of such a second front is delayed, whether because of the unliquidated situation in Tunisia, shipping difficulties or other reasons, the more time Hitler will gain for the execution of a policy of utter ruthlessness, a policy designed to make it as expensive as possible for the Allies to invade Europe and as difficult for them as possible to move on the Reich once the invasion has taken place.

The importance of the rear-guard action which Hitler is carrying out both in Tunisia and in Occupied Europe is not to be minimized.

Russia's Problem

I cannot refrain from expressing my admiration for the strong editorial on Russia's problem in this morning's Post. The analysis of the situation and its perspective on the international problem of collective security for assured peace is powerfully stated. You hit the nail exactly on the head. I am sure it will receive grateful recognition from forward-looking people who are deeply concerned that at least we shall get a secure peace for a time out of this world calamity. As you so ably put it, without Russia or without the United States in it, there can be no stable peace.

Appointing Lame Ducks

I just finished your editorial "The Allred Nomination." Toward the close these words appear: "The practice of appointing lame ducks to high office is bad enough." I do not subscribe to this viewpoint at all.

Many able men are defeated locally by those who couldn't fill their shoes. Sometimes men sacrifice political gain to honor and patriotism. They can and do hold confidence and esteem. If the Republicans win a local district election, they haven't defeated the New Deal nationally; far from it. So, why shouldn't the party take care of its faithful and able. Who else? Senator Norris is a case in point. If only we could use this esteemed Senator's ability and experience in high office.

On the other hand, some men who have lost public confidence and esteem nationally can still win provincially. We've had many such cases recently.

Farm Labor

The labor situation on the farms of this country is desperate. It is entirely inadequate to produce anywhere near the crops of last year when all conditions were favorable, to say nothing of increasing them, which is so earnestly desired. The skilled farm boys have been inducted into the Army, they have volunteered in other branches of the service, they have gone to the cities to work in war plants at high wages. Can their places be adequately filled by city dwellers, high school children and Army detachments? Ask any farmer and hear what he says. Farm work is skilled work.

There is a lot of talk about "incentive payments," higher "parity prices" and "subsidies." In simple language they all mean more money. Did you ever hear of a $10 a $100 or a $1000 bill being sent into the field to sow, cultivate or harvest a crop? The farmer is making good money—he doesn't want any more money—he wants more labor. More money will not buy him more labor because more labor under the present setup simply doesn't exist.

If we are not to be faced with a serious food shortage, yes even worse if nature should be unkind, the farmer must be furnished with sufficient skilled labor and equipment, and it must be done now. There are four ways of accomplishing this, and they should be made effective in the order named until the point is reached where the farmer can properly do the job:

(1) Farm machinery and equipment manufacturers should be given priorities sufficient to produce everything the farmer needs, and he should be assisted in the purchase where necessary.

(2) All present labor on the farm should be frozen right where it is, and further induction and enlisting stopped. The Army and selective service will howl. Let them howl.

(3) Skilled farm labor in the various services should be honorably discharged, or at least furloughed wherever possible, and sent back to the farm. All the various services will howl. Let them howl.

(4) The farm boys now working in war plants should be sent back to the farm. The manufacturers will howl. Let them howl.

The Once Over

Complete Fanatic

("I am a fanatic. I am as fanatical as I ever was. I shall be a fanatic as long as I live."—Adolf Hitler.)

I am a fanatic
And proud of the fact;
Fanatical conduct
Comes first in my act;

I was a fanatic
When but a mere child;
My instincts fanatic
Made mommer quite wild.

Fanatical school days—
How lovely and free!
I nearly made teacher
As crazy as me.

Fanatical boyhood—
It filled me with joy;
The neighbors all called me
"The Fanatic Boy."

"Fanatical Adolf"
I grew up to be;
I never will change;
It's my promise to me!

Fanatical programs,
Fanatical fights,
Fanatical speeches—
They are my delights!

I'll be a fanatic
As long as I live,
I'll make the world shiver
And count shiv by shiv.

I am a fanatic
Without "ifs" and "buts" . . .
In other words, brother,
I'm "Hitler, plain nuts."

The wonders of department stores will never cease. Now Macy's a barnyard center and poultry yard. Somewhere in bustling points around America we can imagine roosters and hens, scurrying about as never before, a little happier than ever and perhaps cackling "It's our best season in years, Macy has taken our entire output."

Cheese is now treated the same as meat by a new OPA order. You have, of course, enjoyed those fine American dinners consisting of a limburger roast, a Swiss cutlet or a tenderloin of Leiderkranz.

It seems that the new meat limit per person will be about a pound and a quarter of meat or cheese a week. That is fair enough, if it helps feed the boys in uniform. But it's going to seem funny to call up the butcher to ask if he has any hamburger and get the answer, "No, but I can let you have a piece of cheese."

Abolish Liquor Stores

I write about the sale of liquor and other intoxicating beverages in the District and the profiteering by the so-called package stores.

The tax that took effect November 1, 1942, raised the price of distilled liquor approximately 50 cents a quart—no more. So what do we find today? The liquor dealers have raised their prices to unheard-of heights and are selling the same liquor in one-fifth of a gallon bottles, in place of the usual quart, at from 40 to 100 per cent increase in price to the buyer at a retail store.

Liquor has no place in the war effort, and the sooner it is abolished the sooner we will win the war. It could be done by executive order of the President, at least for the duration, in some modified form.

Abolish all liquor stores in the United States for the duration and put the parasites in this business to work in some capacity that will be productive.

The tax derived from the liquor industry is peanut money in comparison to the money being expended daily in the war effort—and that seems to be the only reason for its existence today.

Cement Tests

Many purchasers of Portland cement will be shocked to learn that it is a felony to use tests that have been for years in the Book of Standards of the American Society for Testing Materials (260 S. Broad Street, Philadelphia). The War Production Board permits cement to be bought under either the A. S. T. M. Emergency Alternate Specifications or the Federal Specifications, but for some obscure reasons specifically prohibits the use of certain mandatory standard tests to determine whether the cement complies with the specifications.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Civilians And Their Food

THE STARTING point for an understanding of the food problem is to find the correct answer to this question: why is it that in 1942 there was a shortage of certain foods in many stores though in fact the American people ate more food in 1941 and in 1942 than they have ever eaten for at least 30 years.

LIPPMANN

They ate more food per capita than they ate during the first World War. They ate more food per capita than they did in the days of Calvin Coolidge. They ate much more food than they did in the years before the second World War. The year 1942 yielded the greatest bumper crop in the whole history of the country. Yet many staple foods, like beef and butter, have been scarce in the shops, and in some parts of the country almost unobtainable, and it is now necessary to ration them.

Why is this? Why in the midst of statistical plenty is there in fact shortage? Nobody talked about a food crisis in 1939. Yet in 1942 with more food produced, and more food available, the whole country was talking about the food crisis.

BEFORE we can get the right answer to this question, we must clear our minds of the wrong answers. The wrong answers mislead us and prevent us from thinking clearly and therefore from dealing with the problem successfully. Thus it is not true that the food program of the Department of Agriculture has been a failure. Judged by the results, which is the right way to judge it, the Department, favored it is true by superb growing weather, induced a per capita production of food which was 123 per cent of the average for the years 1935-1939. That is far from being a bad record even though it could be argued that a more drastic program to transform agriculture-as-usual into agriculture for war could have done still more. But such a program would have called for changes in the working habits of farmers in large sections of the country, a thing easier said than done. Nobody, then, can honestly say that the food-production program has been a failure when the supply available for civilians was much greater than it was in the years immediately before the war.

Nor can it honestly be said that the Army and lend-lease have taken the food out of our mouths. For after the Army had taken what it wanted, and after lend-lease had taken what it took, there was still much more food eaten per capita by American civilians than in years immediately before the war.

WHAT then is the reason why food has been scarce when there was so much of it? The reason is that the people have been unusually rich while food has by the official price ceilings been kept cheap. That is why more food was eaten than ever before and yet there was not enough food for all the customers who went shopping.

THE ADVOCATES of price ceilings on everything were, at least as regards necessities, right in thinking that in wartime prices ought to be fixed by the Government. But they have never fully appreciated what a radical innovation it is in a capitalist economy to fix maximum prices on everything. For every economy, be it capitalist or collectivist, has to be regulated somehow: there has to be some device by which the demand for goods and the supply of goods is balanced. In a capitalist economy likes ours, it is the rise and fall of prices which regulates the relation between supply and demand. When goods are scare, the price goes up. This cuts down the demand and also stimulates production which, of course, increases the supply. Then as goods become plentiful, the price falls and this stimulates demand and reduces production.

The price mechanism is the central, essential regulating device of a free or capitalist economy. It does not work perfectly. But it works. And it works especially in the realm of agriculture where it is almost impossible to substitute monopolistic controls.

Now, ceilings suspend the working of this essential price mechanism, and without it a free economy has no mechanism for bringing supply and demand together. That is why a few, whom no one listened to, have been insisting since the summer of 1941, that it was no good putting on price ceilings unless at once you set up the machinery of rationing to do what the price mechanism was no longer allowed to do.

DURING 1942 the distribution of food was regulated neither by the mechanism of prices nor by rationing. That explains what happened. It explains why food was bought in immense quantities wherever it was obtainable at the low prices, and why more was wanted. It explains why sections of the country, the Pacific Coast for example, which are far from the food producing centers of the Middle West, could not get the food the people there had the money to buy. It explains the black market where people who have plenty of money will pay more than the cheap ceiling price to producers and distributors who, of course, are glad to get more than the ceiling price.

In short, it is not inadequate production, not the Army and not lend-lease, which have caused and are causing the civilian food problem. It is the absence of any orderly system of regulating the distribution of food.

OUR FOOD problem today, barring the misfortune of crop failures this summer, is to distribute equitably among civilians a food supply approximately as big as the food supply of the years 1935-1939. As we did not starve then, there is no reason why we should starve now.

But since prices are fixed at a time when the wage earners are earning large incomes that cannot be spent on houses, automobiles and the like, the food supply of 1943 cannot be distributed within the population as it was before the war. Then there was a great disparity between what was eaten by the different income groups. Now there has to be a different distribution—one in which the well-to-do lower their standard as compared with the prewar years while the wage-earners have a higher standard than they had then. Few will have as much as they have money to buy, and almost none can have as much as he might like to buy.

THIS IS the effect of rationing—to make the standard of consumption among all the people who have to buy their food more nearly equal. The only alternative to it is to take off the ceilings and let prices run wild, each man for himself and the devil take the hindmost.

That is unthinkable, and therefore, having made up our minds to understand why rationing is necessary, we simply must pull ourselves together and make it work.

Wheeler Drops Bill

Father Deferment

Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, yesterday bowed to requests from the Senate's Democratic and Republican leaders and laid aside his bill to grant blanket draft deferment to all fathers married before Pearl Harbor.

The action came as the Senate labored through a fourth day of consideration of the Johnson-Bankhead farm deferment bill, a measure whose most lukewarm supporters think merits immediate action.

Goes Over to Tuesday

Despite warnings of Senator La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin, and others that passage of the farm deferment bill, to which Wheeler's measure was offered as an amendment, has been made imperative by "utter lack" of Administration leadership, the Senate postponed further consideration of the problem until Tuesday.

A new issue was thrown into the farm-deferment debate, meantime, by Senator Downey (Democrat) of California, who submitted an amendment calling for deferment of transportation workers in areas were shortages of such workers are critical.

"Our entire civilian economy is breaking down," Downey warned.

It was quite obvious that Administration leadership was pleased to have debate over the Bankhead bill protracted by subsidiary issues. Observers believed the measure would pass if brought to a vote, but the delay is gratifying to Mr. Roosevelt's adherents as it give his manpower-planning committee additional time in which to submit a report.

"There is no particular hurry on this bill," Barkley told reporters.

"Manpower Muddle"

La Follette attacked the "manpower muddle" as "symptomatic, I am afraid, of our war administration." He referred to the controversy within the Department of Agriculture over programs for farm labor recruitment and food production as "internecine warfare" which has spread out over agricultural areas of the country with Government agencies and farmers' organizations "at each others' throats."

In the House, meanwhile, battle lines were forming for a showdown over President Roosevelt's program for mobilizing a farm labor force under the direction of the Farm Security Administration.

The House Appropriations Committee formally reported legislation slashing 60 per cent from President Roosevelt's 65-million-dollar request for financing "farm army" mobilization and placing responsibility for worker recruitment in the Department of Agriculture Extension Service and the United States Employment Office.

Aside from being a move in a well-organized drive to kill FSA, the bill, sponsored by Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois, directed that none of the 26.1 millions it proposes to appropriate should be used for what Dirksen and other conservative farm leaders call FSA's "social reform" aims. The bill provided that the money shall not be used:

"To fix, regulate, or impose minimum wages or housing standards, to regulate hours of work, or to impose or enforce collective bargaining requirements or union membership with respect to any agricultural labor exempted . . . under the fair labor standards act . . . or any agricultural labor exempted under the provisions of National Labor Relations Act."

FSA's "social reform" program was characterized chiefly by regulations calling for a minimum wage equivalent to 30 cents an hour and stipulating certain minimum housing standards and sanitary facilities for every 25 workers.

The Gallup Poll

American Public About Evenly Divided On Question of Remaining on War Time

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 12.—A year's experience with "War Time" in this country has modified public opinion considerably toward having clocks an hour ahead.

Across the Nation today, fewer people look with favor upon War Time than did so in January, 1942, just before legislation was passed moving the clocks ahead an hour in the interests of industrial production programs. Perhaps more important, farm opposition to War Time has mounted sharply as compared to last year.

This shift in public sentiment concerning War Time takes on added importance in view of the increasing concern over food production schedules. The Department of Agriculture or Congress may want to appoint a special group to investigate how much War Time has hurt farm production, if any, as against its benefits, if any, to industrial production.

Cole Suggested Poll

The Institute took the issue to the American people in a Nation-wide survey at the suggestion of Representative William C. Cole, of Missouri, who has a resolution in the House calling for a return to Standard Time.

Here is the question which field reporters for the Institute put to a cross-section of the people throughout the country:

"A resolution in Congress calls for a return to Standard Time throughout the Nation. If the question were voted on in this State would you vote for returning to Standard Time or staying on War Time?"

The results:

Favor remaining on War Time	44%
Favor return to Standard Time	42
No opinion	14

These findings are contrasted to the January 1942 study, when 57 per cent of those questioned favored War Time, 30 per cent opposed, and 13 per cent had no opinion on the question.

Farmers Are Opposed

While sentiment is today evenly divided for the whole country on the issue, the farmers are now overwhelmingly opposed to War Time. Last year 45 per cent of them favored staying on Standard Time, 36 per cent were willing to go on War Time, and 19 per cent had no opinions. Following is a table showing present farm sentiment as contrasted to urban:

	Favor War Time	Favor Stand. Time	No. Opin.
Farm	23%	66%	11%
Cities and towns under 10,000	39	46	15
Cities and towns over 10,000	53	32	15

The farmers, according to reports from field reporters, contend that their schedules cannot be readjusted to fit legislated time and that the advanced clock brings them only confusion and lowered productiveness.

War Time lay advocates, found strongest among younger people, prefer the advanced clock because of the increased daylight which it affords for purposes of recreation.

Negroes to Make Up 10% Of Armed Forces' Personnel

Induction of Negroes for service in the Navy and Marine Corps to the extent of 10 per cent of those services will start shortly, it was yearned yesterday.

The new policy was decided, it was said, with White House approval, at the insistence of Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt.

The move is being made to supply the naval services with Negroes in proportion to their numbers in the population.

Negroes have been filling 10 per cent of Army calls since the start of Selective Service, although both the Army and Navy have limited strictly the number of Negro volunteers accepted. Until recently the naval services depended exclusively on volunteers for all its manpower and accepted only a few Negroes for special assignments.

Victory for McNutt

Somewhat of a feather in McNutt's cap, the move is viewed as another step in providing for more effective utilization of all available manpower. McNutt's agency has the job of administering the President's policy on "fair employment practice," which bars discrimination against Negroes in war industry employment.

McNutt who has been "on the spot" frequently in enforcing the antidiscrimination policy in industry was said to have pressed hard to persuade the Navy to alter its traditional policy.

It is understood that failure of the armed services to accept Negro volunteers has left many draft boards with surpluses of Negro manpower while they are scraping the bottom of the barrel of able-bodied whites in Class 1-A.

One official stated that if all quota restrictions on race were removed, the bulk of next month's draft quota would be filled by available Negroes in Class 1-A.

It was reported that the Navy would follow the Army's practice of setting up special units for Negroes. It is expected that many units will be assigned to duty at naval shore establishments and to coastal protection work in smaller vessels.

The Marine Corps is expected to increase the number of its Negro battalions. It is understood that all the services are to head toward a total enlistment of 10 per cent Negroes, as a goal.

With our armed forces slated to reach 10.8 millions by the end of the year, this would call for about 1,080,000 Negroes in the armed services, with 820,000 in the Army, and the remainder in the naval services.

Time to Invade, De Gaulle Warns

London, March 12 (INS).—The moment for the Allied invasion of France is near, Gen. Charles De Gaulle declared today. The Fighting French leader called on the United Nations to strike quickly so a nation-wide uprising of French underground patriots could be synchronized with the armies' landing assault.

The continental invasion must come before Germany succeeds in deporting great masses of Frenchmen to the Reich for forced labor in her vital armament industries, De Gaulle warned.

Selectees Home Drills

Urged By General Cox

Night and weekend training for new selectees while they continue at work was advocated before the Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District of Columbia National Guard.

General Cox, who until recently also commanded the Washington Provisional Brigade, proposed this arrangement as a means of assuring continued production without interfering with necessary growth of the Army. He said it would result in making recruits into "acceptable soldiers" in their home towns while "continuing to work on farm and in factory."

Cox testified at a hearing on a bill to provide for a complete mobilization of the Nation's manpower and womanpower.

I do not suggest any limitation on the size of the armed forces," he declared, "or to delay the induction of a single man.

Combe Work, Training

"My suggestion would supplement the War Service Act called for under the Austin-Wadsworth bill."

Instead of concentrating future selectees in large training areas for preliminary training, he asserted the raw inductees could be drilled two or three nights a week and given weekend field training.

This, he said, would cover the development of a soldier "up to thorough field training and the hardening process" even as he continued his production.

"It is not necessary to keep men in training camps two or more years," the witness testified. "A soldier can go stale with too much training.

"The Government has spent billions of dollars in prewar training of National Guardsmen. Millions of dollars have been spent in building armories throughout the Nation. These armories are available for training of civilians to be soldiers."

Points to Savings

He said the National Guard developed acceptable soldiers by training them one night a week, supplemented by two weeks of field training in the summer.

"This program could be enlarged upon, providing two or three nights a week of training with weekends in the field.

"Within three months a man could be made ready for intensive training and the hardening process without being lost to agriculture and industry."

He said the Government could save "millions of dollars by this program."

He said the plan was necessary to avert food and weapon shortages.

Gen. Saunders, Lieut. Greeson Win Awards

Brig. Gen. Laverne George Saunders, 39, whose wife lives at 323 Sixth Street Southeast, has been awarded the Navy Cross by Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of South Pacific forces, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

General Saunders commanded a group of bombers and fighters during a raid on Jap shipping in the Buin-Tonolei area November 18 and despite strong enemy opposition made a successful raid on shipping. His plane was badly damaged and he landed it on the water in enemy territory. Later he and his crew were able to return to their own forces, the Navy reported.

General Saunders received the Distinguished Service Medal here February 24 in recognition of his service as commander of a bombardment group in the South Pacific area. The group, from July 31 to November 30, piled up a record of destruction against the Japs which included sinking of four Jap ships, damaging of 15 and probable damaging of nine others.

Another District officer, Lieut. Eugene E. Greeson of 3223 Hiatt Place Northwest, has won the Army's Air Medal for "meritorious achievement" in participating in more than 25 flight missions in the Southwest Pacific from December 8, 1941, to November, 1942, the War Department announced.

Lieutenant Greeson flew to the Philippines in October, 1941, and saw service there as a combat bombardier and as assistant communications officer on the staff of General Sharp. He already has received the Silver Star and the Purple Heart.

Rubber After The War

Fate Of Synthetic Product

By Jack Bell

Associated Press Staff Writer

Vice President Wallace declared yesterday that whether the United States continues to produce synthetic rubber in commercial quantities after the war ought to depend on its ability to meet price competition from a tariff-free natural product.

The Vice President told the Associated Press he agreed with Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan, that the final decision on the maintenance or postwar abandonment of plants now under construction rests with Congress. The question hinges, Wallace said, on whether Congress wants to protect the synthetic product with a tariff that would raise the price of tires to motorists.

Vandenberg told the Senate Thursday, in the course of a speech warning executive departments against committing this country on postwar economic policies, that some of the "highly authoritative statements" of the Vice President seemed to "promise postwar abandonment of most of our synthetic rubber production."

Questioned on this point, Wallace said he agreed with the Michigan Senator's contention that Congress had the final word on such policies.

Agrees With Senator

"I agree with the Senator that if synthetic rubber of equal quality can be produced on a basis where it can, without tariffs, compete with natural rubber, no obstacle should be placed in its way," the Vice President said.

"I have no prejudices against synthetic rubber," he added. "With me, it is a matter of where we can get the most for our money."

There is no reason, Wallace argued, why motorists should have to pay the cost of a tariff if that is necessary to continue postwar production of synthetic rubber on a commercial basis.

It must be remembered, he said, that while great strides are being made in cutting the cost and improving the quality of synthetics, equally great advances are being made in producing trees of higher yielding capacity.

Agreement Assailed

Vandenberg quoted Wallace as having urged that only a few, small alcohol process plants be maintained after the war to keep this country abreast of synthetic developments and advocating that most of the rubber needs be filled by purchases of the cheaper natural product from Latin-America and Asia.

He said that one section of an agreement signed at Rio de Janeiro January 28, 1942, by 21 republics, including the United States, was "a masterpiece of imponderable diplomatic craftsmanship" but seemed to imply that the United States might "avoid the maintenance of synthetic rubber plants" after the war.

Referring to the Vice President's warning in a speech recently that another war might be provoked by "double-crossing Russia," Vandenberg said precautions should be taken to prevent other peoples from "even thinking they are being double-crossed."

Bank Assets at Record Peak, FDIC Head Tells President

By the Associated Press

Reviewing the banking situation for the ten years ending this month, Chairman Leo T. Crowley of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation told President Roosevelt yesterday the Nation's banks have recovered to the "strongest asset position of record."

Crowley reported that with adequate earnings in prospect and deposits at a record high of 90 billion dollars, the banking system "is ready to meet any war demands which may be made." More than 70 per cent of bank assets today are in Government securities and cash with the remaining assets "generally sound" with few notable exceptions, he said.

Describing the earnings and profits outlook for most banks at the present time as "good," Crowley expressed the hope banks would keep a large proportion of any increased profits in their capital accounts "in order that they will be in a position when the war is over to renew normal business and to finance the conversion of industry to peacetime activities."

He said that for half a century the investment of funds in the capital of banks has not kept pace with the growth in bank assets. As a result many banks will find themselves "without sufficient capital to take a reasonable share of the risks inherent in financing business in a dynamic postwar era."

Crowley said since its establishment in 1933 the FDIC has saved from loss more than 1,250,000 depositors (99.8 per cent) in 390 insured banks which have closed since then. Depositors in those banks with balances in excess of the $5000 insurance maximum will lose less than three million dollars, he reported. In contrast, during the 10 years preceding the bank holiday depositors in 13,500 closed banks lost two billion dollars and stockholders another two billion dollars.

The corporation, Crowley reported, has accumulated a surplus of 325 million dollars despite its assumption of 50 million dollars of losses, which otherwise would have fallen on depositors in the closed banks.

"The corporation," he said, "could be liquidated today and could repay all of the insurance assessments paid by the banks, and the entire contribution of the Government with a dividend on the latter of 7 per cent."

The President, commenting on the report at a press conference, described as amazing that part showing deposit insurance now is providing full protection for more than 65 million accounts.

Army of 8 Million Planned in 1943-44, Gen. Edwards Says of 1943, but to the end of 1944.

"We estimated what shipping would be available to us during that period, and we determined that that shipping could transport so many of the air force units and so many divisions and other ground troops overseas by the end of 1944. Therefore, we have to bring into the army and train in 1943, the number of men that we need to take advantage of that shipping capacity in 1944."

Edwards stated that "the War Department is anxious to level off as soon as we can," explaining that the Army would thus recover 500,000 to 700,000 men out of training establishments and overhead.

"These men can be used to augment our fighting units," he said.

Asked by Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama, to discuss Army plans after 1944, Edwards replied:

"It is too early to plan for a further expansion in the size of the Army at this time."

Declines to Predict

Bankhead asked him whether it was planned to increase the armed forces—presumably beyond the 8.2 million mark.

"That will depend on the situation," General Edwards replied. "I wouldn't attempt to give an answer to that now."

Edwards stated that 7.3 millions would be enlisted men, 200,000 would be WAACS, and 700,000 officers.

"And if given additional WAACS, the number of males will go down," General Edwards said. "We have a plan before Congress to put the WAACS in the Army. A woman is just as useful to the Army in many jobs as a man. And as the WAACS grow in size, we will have to draw much less male manpower into the Army."

He added that the Army was having "extremely good luck" with the WAACS, "getting the cream of the womanhood of the country."

A total of two millions out of the 5.5 millions remaining in the United States in 1943 will be in training for combat service overseas in 1944, Edwards said. A total of one million out of the 3.45 millions left in the United States in 1944 will be in training for combat service overseas in 1945, he said.

On the Line: Ross Tells of 'Canal;' Pleads for Sports for 'Our Boys'

By Bob Considine

New York, March 12.—The boxing writers closed in today on Corpl. Barney Ross, after the picture men and a few autograph seekers had nabbed him at Red Cross headquarters, and a marine companion muscled a passageway through the crowd, saying "break it up. Break it up."

"It's okay . . . This is my old mob," Ross said, with a tired grin on his brown face. He ran a hand through his graying hair and called out to the boys he knew. It was like old times around one of his fight camps, in that it was informal. But it was an older Ross, spic and span (and limping from shrapnel) in his fresh marine uniform, and the tales he had to tell were strange. He sat down and put his cane beside him.

"I got it on the canal," he said. "Bought it from a native. Yeah, that's right. That's Jap teeth stuck in it."

We'll tell you what he told us, and wish we could get his sincerity into these words:

"I heard about you fellows voting me the Eddie Neil trophy while I was in New Zealand. I heard it on the hospital radio. Yeah, they took me there after the canal. It certainly was wonderful of you all to think about me, and to write those nice things. Heck.

"Sports news meant an awful lot to us out there. Ouring football season, our guys bet like crazy. We didn't have money half the time so we made jawbone bets, and paid off when we got it. We'd get the scores at 7 o'clock Saturday night. I can't tell you how interested they are in sports out there—how much they want them to keep going. They need sports equipment terribly. Any kind; every kind.

"I guess one of the biggest betting stories out there was the time I fought the local champ from the village. Some of the boys heard that he was around, and could fight pretty good. So they told the villagers that the marines had a fighter who wanted to fight the local guy. I didn't hear about the fight until it was almost time.

"Anyway, a big bunch of villagers came out to where I was, and brought along their champ. He was about as wide as he was tall, weighed about 230, and the villagers were backing him solid. He was half drunk. Our guys said, 'Ross, you're going to fight him, and don't forget we've bet about two grand on you.' I wasn't in any condition, and he outweighed me maybe 75 pounds. But that didn't seem very important.

"The local champ wanted to fight bare-fisted. We had an old pair of 16-ounce gloves that had been beaten down to about 8 ounces. There was an argument back and forth, but we finally agreed to use them. Well, it was a bloody three rounds. I had him on the deck two or three times, and he would have had me there if he could have hit me on the chin.

"Anyway, after the third round, the native referee, who was holding the dough, came over and dumped it into the lap of one of our sergeants. And the natives left their champ lying under a tree, bleeding. They wouldn't even help him take his gloves off. So I took them off. All he could say was 'I fight good when I drunk.'"

Barney says the Jap is a good fighter. "What makes them tough is they're so unorthodox. But that's a lot of bunk about them not surrendering, though," he said. "Sometimes they'd come out of the jungle and get in our chow lines. The smell of food was too much for them. I will say, though, that their officers rarely, if ever, give up. Seems to me that some of those regular Jap soldiers weren't over 15 or 16 years old, and most of them were starving. Sometimes we'd come across 15 or 20 of them dead, and not a mark on them. Just starved.

"Our fellows were much better, man for man. We always outgamed them. We'll hold the Canal, definitely. I can't tell you how great our fellows are out there. There just aren't any words. They've just got something the Japs haven't got. I think boxing has helped our boys a lot. They get accustomed to it in boot camps. It won't help you duck a bullet, but it teaches you how to hit the deck.

"The best meal I ever had, anywhere, was on Christmas Day on the Canal. We had everything—turkey, with all the white meat you wanted, plum pudding, punch, mince pie . . . everything. Had a good meal on my birthday, too. That was December 23."

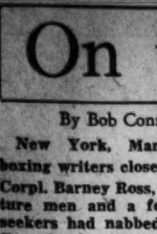
Ross will go to Washington tomorrow, to report to Marine headquarters, and return here Monday for a Red Cross rally at the Garden. He is on a 30-day furlough, and is still recovering from malaria. His friends and his Red Cross work have kept him going night and day. "It's been great," he said, plainly exhausted, "but I wish they'd give me room enough now and then to hit the deck."

WASHINGTON, MAR. 13, 1943

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

There will be no great exodus from the big cities when the major league ball players start converging on the training camps next week. The better ball players rarely come from the big towns. The crossroad hamlets and whistle-stops which have been providing the bulk of the big leaguers for years, are still the chief source of supply.



POVICH

That's probably one reason why baseball is the national game. The big cities may claim the ball teams, but the provinces have a stronger rooting interest. It's their native sons who are in the headlines. The major league fan may get no closer to Joe Blow than a grandstand seat but back home the folks know him as the kid who used to live next door.

Who are the world champions of baseball, for instance? The St. Louis Cardinals, of course. And where do the Cardinals come from? Not from St. Louis. In fact, there isn't a player on the team who lives in St. Louis. But Ash Flat, Ark., and Broken Bow, Okla., and Pascagoula, Miss., and Olivia, Minn., and Pacolet Mills, S. C., know all about the Cardinals. They know 'em as hometown boys, as do Hicksville, Ohio; Bangs, Tex.; Donora, Pa., and Atherton, Mo. That's where the Cardinals really come from.

Baseball casts up some strange cases. When Bucky Harris was given the job of managing the Phils, he found himself in possession of an outfielder, Roberto Ortiz, willy nilly. When he managed the Nats, Harris tried unsuccessfully to trade off Ortiz for three years before he finally succeeded. The Phils bought him. And now Harris manages the Phils. One of his first acts in his new job was to sell Ortiz to Brooklyn.

In contrast, Harris now discovers that his first baseman with the Phils is Ed Levy, the tall fellow who batted .306 for Kansas City last year. It took Harris five years to catch up with Levy. On a day in 1938, a big chap walked into the Nats' Orlando, Fla., training camp from nearby Rollins College for a tryout. It was First Baseman Levy.

Harris watched the fellow hit and field, and took an instant shine to him. He asked him to return the next day for another trial, and advised Clark Griffith to sign the fellow. Levy never came back to the Nats. A Yankee scout moved into Orlando that night and signed the fellow for the Yanks.

Levy is the chap who, when he signed his contract last year, penned his name as Ed Whitner. General Manager Ed Barrow of the Yankees, asked him why he was no longer using the name of Levy. The lad explained that Levy was his step-father's name, that he had only recently met his own father, and because he liked him he was using his true name of Whitner.

"Nothing doing," said Barrow. "While you're with the Yankees, you're name is Levy. With 2 million Jewish fans in New York, we want a Levy on our team."

Among the problems that confronts Clark Griffith as his Nats prepare to open spring training at College Park on Monday, is the rubber situation. Unless it is solved, the club won't be able to use the robot pitching machine which Griffith bought last year for $1500.

"The machine operates with a heavy band of natural rubber that when snapped gives the force to the ball," explains Griffith, "and we're having a time buying new rubber. It's high on the priorities list. There's no such item as a syntheic rubber substitute for what we need. It must be the best native rubber. I'm hoping the Government will release 5 pounds of it for us."

The pitching machine bulks pretty big in the Nats' spring training plans. Because they are training in the North and the pitchers are unlikely to be ready to show the batters any speed before the start of the season, the mechanical pitching contraption is important to the club. It can't curve a pitch, but it can sling the balls at various speeds with perfect control.

The machine's control was proved to Griffith's satisfaction one day in Florida last winter when the salesman stood a bat vertically on home plate and adjusted the machine with such precision that it's pitches knocked the bat down five times in succession.

Walker Counter Punches to Win Over Musto

Chicago Boy Is Popular In Defeat

Forces Action From Start; Face Is Cut Early; 1975 See Battle at Uline's

By Al Costello

Jack (Buddy) Walker, Columbus heavyweight, scored a 10-round victory over rugged Tony Musto, of Chicago, last night at Uline Arena, but the sentiments of the 1975 crowd which paid $2,458 were all with the Galento-shaped boy from the Windy City.

Walker won the decision alright, there wasn't much question about that. But in so winning, the Ohio heavyweight made few friends as he failed to take a forward step all night. Rather he was content to let the "Baby Tank" come to him and then counter punch, which in fairness to Buddy, he did masterfully.

But if it had not have been for Musto's willingness to come to Walker, there wouldn't have been much of a fight. Buddy gave Tony both barrels and can never complain about not tagging Tony. He did, time and again, but Musto was just too tough to let it worry him much.

Tony's Face Smeared

From the third round on, Tony's face was a smear of gore, brought about from a solid punch and it continued to bleed throughout. Walker suffered a slightly cut mouth, and, in the ninth, was sporting a mouse under the right eye.

Walker's unsatisfying style piled up an early lead as he took the first four rounds strictly on counter punching. In the fifth, one of Tony's best rounds, he shook up the Columbus boy with a couple of solid left hooks to the mid-section, which Walker evidently did not like. In the seventh, both went down for no counts. Each half slipped as the punch landed. However, no damage was done.

Walker Sharpshooter

Tony's style of throwing his left hook out of a low crouch was, to all appearances, made to order for Buddy. Walker was almost a master at sharp shooting and while it earned him merited points on the judges' score pads, it did not please the crowd.

Walker weighed 189½, while Tony came in at 199.

Lambertine Williams, 158, Baltimore, won a six-round decision over Buddy Holmes, 159, of Washington, in the semifinal. Williams won through superior body punching.

In the best fight of the preliminaries, Jessie Harris, 149, Curtis Bay Coast Guardsman, outpointed Pete Geno, 150½, New York, in a fast and close bout. Geno landed the harder punches, but Harris' darting left earned him the verdict of the judges.

Joey Crump, 185, Baltimore, hung up a four-round win over Dan Biggers, 188, also of Baltimore, and in a fight that ended before it really started.

Kid Wolf, U Street Hurricane, knocked out Joe Price of Washington in 22 seconds. Price didn't know what hit him and wanted to fight when he finally came back from his trip to oblivion.

Mad Russian

Sure to Win Bat Crown—Novikoff

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 12.—Baseball's socking Soviet, the clowning Lou Novikoff of the Chicago Cubs, says it's in the bag for him to win the National League batting crown this year.

NOVIKOFF

"With all those old-timers throwing big fat ones up to the plate it ought to be easy," Novikoff volunteered at the end of a full day of physical exertion at a pipe and steel company, where he has pared his weight to within 8 pounds of normal.

The Mad Russian had led every league he has played in except the National with his big bat, his first year in baseball excepted. He has topped the Three Eye, Texas, Coast and the American Association, and—

"This year I start as a regular, and I'm going to click from the start," beamed Lou. "Y'know I might have led the National last year, instead of finishing in a tie for fifth with Ducky Medwick except for being hit by Bucky Walters about a month before the close. I was batting .317 at the time and my shoulder hurt so much I could hardly lift my bat."

Whit Wyatt Signs; Hopes For Big Year

Winner of 19 Games Has Drilled for Two Weeks; Chet Kehn Announces Induction

By the Associated Press

New York, March 12.—John Whitlow Wyatt, head man of the Brooklyn Dodgers' pitching staff, has signed his 1943 contract and is hoping for a better season than last year when he won 19 games and lost seven, President Branch Rickey announced today.

Although the Dodgers don't begin training until Monday, Wyatt already has spent two weeks at Hot Springs, Ark., getting into condition and reported that he is in better shape than he has been for several seasons.

"Wyatt thinks Brooklyn might have won the pennant last year if he had been in condition earlier," Rickey said. I don't think he had a bad year and I expect great things of him this season."

The Dodgers also announced they had received a telegram from Pitcher Chet Kehn saying he was about to be inducted into the Army at his home in San Diego, Calif.

Kehn, who came up from Brooklyn's Montreal farm in the International League last year in time to pitch eight innings for the Dodgers, was the first Brooklyn player to sign a contract for 1943.

Berres Signs Late

New York, March 12 (AP).—Secretary Eddie Brannick of the New York Giants today paused long enough from his tas of arranging for the departure of some 32 players for spring training at Lakewood, N. J., to announce that Ray Berres, veteran catcher, had sent in his signed contract.

The Giants will pull out from the Liberty Street Ferry Sunday morning and Manager Mel Ott is hoping that Pitcher Cliff Melton will be in the party. Melton is due in town tomorrow to talk over contract matters with Ott.

Pirate Hurler Called

Pittsburgh, March 12 (AP).—Ken Heintzelman, 26-year-old southpaw pitcher of the Pittsburgh Pirates, notified the club today he had been ordered to report next Wednesday for induction into the Army at Jefferson, Mo.

If inducted, Heintzelman will be the eleventh Buc to go into the armed services. He won eight and lost 11 last year.

Bridges Ready

Evansville, Ind., March 12 (AP).—The years may take some of the zip out of Tommy Bridges' arm but nothing from his industry. The veteran Detroit Tiger pitcher, ready for his fourteenth major league season, is already on hand for spring training at the wartime base here. Formal practice starts Monday.

Bridges arrived unannounced yesterday to join the small group of Tiger officials and players who came in ahead of time.

Tigers Lose Infielder

Detroit, March 12 (AP).—The training camp roster of the Detroit Tigers was reduced to 30 players today by the announcement that Joseph Wessing, rookie second baseman, would remain on his job in New Orleans. Wessing reported that he had received 1-A draft classification and expected to be in the Army soon.

Wessing batted a slim .227 with Beaumont of the Texas League last summer but was highly regarded by Manager Steve O'Neill for his defensive talents.

Boxing Honors Its 'Man of the Year'

Barney Brings Down the Roof With Speech

By the Associated Press

New York, March 12.—Corp. Barney Ross, a hero of Guadalcanal, spoke tonight from the Madison Square Garden ring after a capacity crowd roared their cheers at the presentation of boxing's "Man of the Year" trophy to Ross. He said:

"I am doubly grateful to be chosen by the Red Cross and the Boxing writers to appear here on behalf of all our men in the fighting forces. But I know in my heart so many others are more deserving of this tribute and glory than I am.

"God bless all our boys on the fighting front. And we say a prayer for one man every night, who has been heart and soul with us through every day and every night. He prays and worries for us. I mean our wonderful President, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

That's where the roof went off.

Irish Win 18th, Top Detroit, 52-43

South Bend, Ind., March 12 (AP). The University of Notre Dame closed one of its most successful basketball seasons tonight by taking its eighteenth victory from the University of Detroit, 52 to 43. The Irish lost only two games this season.

19,982 See Brawl For Top Spot in Heavy Class

By the Associated Press

New York, March 12.—Jimmy Bivins just about clinched his spot at the head of the parade of all active heavyweights tonight by pounding out a slashing 10-round decision over young Tami Mauriello before a jam-packed Madison Square Garden crowd. Bivins scaled 177¼, Mauriello 187.

Making it two in a row over the kid from the Bronx, Jimmy came close to punching Tami's ears off through the middle rounds and then stood off his rival's closing rush to win by a narrow edge after 10 heats of the fastest heavyweight hammering seen here in quite a spell.

The Cleveland Negro did it the hard way, too, for he lost the seventh round for a low punch that caught Tami just below the belt line as he leaped up for a long left jab. At the finish, the Associated Press score card gave Jimmy six rounds to four for Tami. Referee Arthur Donovan and Judge Johnny Potter cast their ballots for Bivins while Judge Marty Monroe voted for draw.

With the heavyweight brawl to look at and a welcome to Marine Corporal Barney Ross as an extra attraction, the biggest crowd of the season—19,982—contributed to the season's "hottest" gate of $74,715. Ross received the Edward J. Neil memorial trophy as "boxing's man of the year" for 1942 for his job of "Kayoing" 22 Japs in one night on Guadalcanal.

By making his previous decision—scored last fall—stick, Bivins has just about cleaned up on the wartime active heavyweight ranks. In the past year, he has mopped up, among others, such top-flight campaigners as Robert Pastor, Lee Savold, as well as Tami.

For Tami, it was a double dose of bitters. He not only failed to get revenge for his previous defeat but this was his last chance for quite a spell. From here he signs up to do his fighting with Uncle Sam's Army.

For two rounds tonight, as he scored in the first with effective whacks and connected with a staggering right to the jaw in the second, it looked as though he might bow out a winner. But starting with the third, Bivens found the combination and proceeded to raise lumps on Tami.

The fifth was probably Bivens' best round. He pummeled Mauriello about the premises, from rope to rope, and at the end of the heat the local lad was a tired warrior.

St. Patrick's Wins

St. Patrick's girls scored their second basketball victory of the year over St. Cecelia's yesterday in St. Patrick's gym, 25-24. Mary Larkin, with 13 points, led the winners.

Nats Complete Deal; Millers Get Layne

The Nats will send Infielder Hillis Layne to the Minneapolis club as part payment in the deal that brought Pitcher Owen Sheetz to Washington, it was disclosed yesterday.

Layne replaces Infielder Jimmy Pofahl, originally included in the deal by the Nats. Pofahl's decision to quit baseball in favor of his job in war industry left the Nats owing Minneapolis a player.

Layne was out of baseball last year while in the Army. He was given a medical discharge because of a leg condition, but plans to return to baseball next season. He was the leading hitter of the Southern Association with Chattonooga in 1941 and received a brief tryout with the Nats at third base.

Phillies Pledged

Philadelphia, March 12 (AP).—Danny Litwhiler, only standout performer in last year's cast of the Philadelphia Phillies, is safely back in the fold, bringing with him a pledge to Bucky Harris, the new manager, that he and his teammates "will pitch in and give you the best we have."

Litwhiler, who performed the astonishing feat of playing errorless ball with the Phillies last season, and Ron Northey told Harris yesterday that their contracts were satisfactory. With Earl Naylor, previously signed, and Playing Coach Chuck Klein, they complete the Phillies' present outfield.

Navy Favored In College Mat Tourney

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, March 12.—Navy's grappling midshipmen sailed into a minor gale in the semi-final round of the tweny-ninth annual Eastern Intercollegiate wrestling championship tonight but still remained the favorite as they sent five men into tomorrow's finals.

Only Penn State, the defending team champion, which placed three in the finals, is conceded an outside chance of halting the future ensigns' cruise to their first eastern title.

After experiencing calm weather in the preliminaries and quarters finals when they qualified their full eight-man team without a defeat, the sailors from Annapolis were handed three setbacks in tonight's semi-finals.

Penn, Lehigh and Army each qualified two for the finals, and Princeton and Cornell one each. Harvard, Columbia and Syracuse failed to gain a finalist.

There was only one casualty among the five defending champions, and he forfeited without wrestling. Warren E. Taylor, Princeton 136-pounder withdrew from the tournament when he was unable to compete because of boils on his shoulder.

Champions who came through were Penn State's Charles Ridenour at 128, and Sam Harry at 136, Penn's Dick Di Battista at 175, and Swift. Ridenour annexed the 121-pound title and Harry the 128 last year, but both have moved up a weight division.

Max Bishop Acquitted

Baltimore, March 12 (AP).—Max F. Bishop, Navy's head baseball coach, and three of five other men accused of violating the Migratory Bird Treaty Act were acquitted today in Federal court.

Phils' Etten Deal May Flop

Philadelphia, March 12 (AP).—The deal that sent first baseman Nick Etten from the Phillies to the New York Yankees several months ago may be cancelled, it was disclosed today.

Etten was traded by former President Gerry Nugent for pitcher Allen Gettell and first baseman Ed Levy and an undisclosed sum of money; generally supposed to be $15,000.

Today, however, manager Bucky Harris said he had received word from Gettell that the pitcher has decided to stay on his farm near Norfolk, Va., this season. In addition Harris said he hasn't heard from Levy; that rookie catcher Bill Anske has been inducted into the Army; and that the veteran pitcher, Johnny Allen, has returned his contract unsigned. Allen was obtained from the Brooklyn Dodgers in exchange for Rube Melton and $30,000 in another deal arranged by the former Nugent regime.

If Gettell and Levy fail to report it was hinted that the Etten transaction may be taken to Commissioner Landis for a ruling.

Harris announced, however, the acquisition of a pitcher he said might be the "Dizzy Dean" of the Phils' training camp at Hershey, Pa. The rookie, who sold himself by telephoning and writing Harris, is 24-year-old Bill Webb of Atlanta, Ga., who pitched five weeks in 1941 for Mobile of the Southeastern League, winning four and losing one. Last year Webb said he played amateur ball.

Lions Wind Up Season With Hornet Six

Two of the American Hockey League's bitterest rivals are to ring down the 1942-43 season at Uline Arena tonight when Pittsburgh's Hornets meet Washington's Lions at 8:30 o'clock.

The local icemen not only will be out after their fourth consecutive home victory but also after their fourth successive verdict over the Hornets.

The local pros twice won over Pittsburgh in Duquesne Garden, hive of the Hornets, and more recently in a row here.

The Lion-Hornet warfare was climaxed in Pittsburgh a few weeks ago when Chuck Corrigan, big winner of the Hornets, checked Washington defenseman Will Hoch into the boards so savagely Hoch was forced to repair to a hospital for several days for treatment.

Although the Lions have been eliminated from the American League's rich championship, they have played markedly improved hockey within the past two weeks.

Pin Highlights

Abe Weinberg's 144-399 led his Milton's Service quintet in the Hebrew League at Penn Recreation, but the team dropped all three to Clover Market last night. Benny Rubin's 143-361 and Dave Singer's 133-349 topped Kasper's Men's Shop and helped in a sweep over Phalanx, while York Liquor posted team highs of 626-1799 to win three from T. D. O. Goldfarb's 134-375 enabled Nurim Club to win a pair from Washington Paper . . . Tonight at 7:30 the Absher Construction quintet will roll against George Hurwitz's Bethesdans at Clarendon with such stars as Tony Santini, Ed Blakeney, Karl Gochenour, Bill King, Zi Geib, Al Wright, Jack Talbert, Lee Marcey, Ed Nash, Perce Wolfe, Harry Hilliard and Julie Singer . . . Joe Freschi's 152-411 and Charley Patterson's 151-405 topped the Brookland Merchants, with the Freschi's taking team honors after pinfalls of 656-1811. Rinaldi Coal, Freschi's, Old Mill Cafe, Brookland Bakery, The Tavern and Rice's Unity Craftsmen won three each . . . Herman Staffel's 187 game and his 458 set dominated the Southern Railway League at Lafayette. The 458 set was Staffel's first 400 achievement and established an all-time high for the loop, which was organized back in 1909. Staffel's Storekeepers team won three to lock up the second spot in the league race . . . George Glorious had his first 400 set last night when he posted 442 following a 166-record game in the Mount Rainier Commercial loop. His house team captured three straight from opponents and also rolled high totals of 646-1754.

J. C. C. Swim Tonight Lures Large Field

Between 50 and 75 swimmers are expected to compete tonight in the 10-event invitation swimming meet at the Jewish Community Center pool at 8 p. m.

Foremost among the entries are those of the Ambassador Swimming Club's men's and women's teams, which swept the field in the open meet at the Ambassador pool last week. Other teams include the Southeast Boys' Club aggregation and a women's team representing the Shoreham Club.

Favored in the men's competition will be Sailor John Dilley and young Gene Cunney, both of Ambassador, who swim the free style and back stroke events. They were the only dual winners last week, Dilley taking the men's 50-yard free style and 150-yard back stroke while Cunney won in the boys' class.

Two District A. A. U. champions, Betty Roland of Shoreham, and Leola Thomas, Ambassador back stroker, will be dangerous contenders in the distaff division. Phoebe Hudson, the youthful sprint star from the Washington Golf and Country Club, is another.

Exhibition diving will be an added feature. Efforts are being made to have Patsy Palmer and Irving Bridgers, the new District of Columbia A. A. U. low board champions, on the card.

Hoyas to Have Baseball Team, Gardner Coach

Though its student body has been cut in two by the war, Georgetown University will put a baseball team in the field this spring, it was decided yesterday.

Coach of the Hoyas, replacing Joe Judge, will be their graduate manager of athletics, Joe Gardner. A 12-game schedule will be arranged, with Army, Fordham, Temple and West Virginia on the list. An exhibition with the Nats is also planned.

Capital Store Sales Up 22% During Week

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales in the week ended March 6 leaped 22 per cent as compared with the same 1942 week, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. However, local sales were 8 per cent under the previous week this year.

Store sales in the Fifth Federal Reserve District as a whole showed a gain of 17 per cent over the corresponding week last year.

For the four weeks ended March 6, local retail sales were 24 per cent heavier than in the same 1942 period and the entire Reserve district showed a jump of 33 per cent.

Meanwhile, Dun & Bradstreet's weekly trade review noted that the rush of retail buying was slowed this week by unfavorable weather in some sections and the approaching income tax deadline.

"Stock-up buying, although definitely diminished," said the report, "still boosted sales above levels usually expected at this period . . . Trade increases over a year ago narrowed sharply in all sections of the country. The country-wide average was estimated 5 to 12 per cent greater than a year ago . . . In wholesale markets, major emphasis again centered on deliveries, although ordering continued brisk where goods were available."

Nationally, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that department store sales last week were 14 per cent higher than during the corresponding week a year ago.

New Record in Power Sales

Electric power sales in Washington totaled 103,038,220 kilowatt hours in February, a new record for that month and a gain of 15.3 per cent over the same month last year.

The February power output, however, was somewhat less than that for January, when 106,184,190 kilowatt hours was sold. The drop was attributed to fewer days in February, not less consumption. Figures were reported yesterday by the Potomac Electric Power Co.

Pierrot in New Post

McDonnell Aircraft Corporation has announced the opening of a Washington office directed by A. Ogden Pierrot. Mr. Pierrot comes to the company from the aircraft production division of the WPB where he was chief of engine production planning. He is a graduate of Georgetown University's Foreign Service School. He was trade commissioner and later commercial attache to the United States Embassy at Rio de Janeiro for 10 years.

The company's office will be located in the Shoreham Building.

Sailors Who Desert Giraud Stir Criticism

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

French sailors who have been deserting the Richelieu and other warships to fight under the banner of Gen. Charles de Gaulle are impairing the Allies' war effort, a high official said here yesterday.

The United States Government he said, is helping to rehabilitate the French ships so that they will be of the greatest use in the war effort.

But when different French elements, he said, quarrel over which outfit the sailors shall go with, the efficiency of the ships is reduced and the war effort impaired.

The official, who doubtless bespoke this Government's attitude toward the desertions, made his statement when asked to comment on the status of 12 French sailors who are now held on Ellis Island.

The case of these 12 is regarded as a test case in a situation that grows out of the antagonism between the forces of Gen. de Gaulle and those of Gen. Henri Honore Giraud. Both of the generals have navies as well as armies.

General de Gaulle's Fighting French navy consists of destroyers and corvettes that serve in convoy work and of motorboats that patrol the English Channel.

General Giraud's seagoing arm consists of the Richelieu, France's greatest battleship, and other men-o'-war that came over to the Allies as a result of the late Admiral Jean Darlan's "deal" with the United States last November. The Richelieu, damaged at Dakar, is now undergoing repairs in New York.

Thus, far, it is reported from New York, some 300 sailors have deserted the Richelieu, and her officers are fearful that they will not have enough men to man the big vessel unless the desertions stop.

The deserters, in going over to General de Gaulle's Fighting French, have been quoted as saying that they did not trust their Giraud officers because they had given them orders to fire on the Americans in Africa and because they made speeches indicating they were "Vichy men and collaborationists with Hitler."

Illegal Entry Charged

The 12 French sailors now on Ellis Island got there as a result of the action of the naval mission representing General Giraud in the United States. This mission asked the Navy Department to round up deserters from the Richelieu. The Navy Department evidently got in touch with the Naturalization Service and immigration authorities began the roundup.

The Naturalization Service said that the 12 sailors were charged with illegal entry into the United States and that they would get a hearing in Washington before the Immigration Appeals Board after a preliminary examination at Ellis Island.

The Giraud forces, in asking action by this Government, said that the sailors were absent without leave from the Richelieu, and that was the basis for the illegal entry charge.

The De Gaullists say that the arrest of the men, all of whom carried papers saying they had signed up with the Fighting French, was an apparent violation of an agreement between the De Gaullists and the United States. This agreement was concluded last August, they say, and provided for an extension of all courtesies by immigration officials to the forces of the Fighting French.

High Court Hears Willkie On Marxism

By James W. Douthat
Associated Press Staff Writer

Gesturing vigorously, Wendell L. Willkie yesterday told the Supreme Court that it would be a grave abridgement of constitutional freedom to cancel a man's citizenship because he belonged to the Communist Party.

The 1940 Republican presidential nominee appeared in behalf of his client, William Schneiderman, State secretary of the Communist Party of California and a native of Russia. Willkie has announced that he is representing Schneiderman without compensation and is paying his own expenses.

He said a Federal District Court should not have canceled Schneiderman's citizenship because of Communist Party membership and "belief in the Communist manifesto in the light of conditions in Europe in 1848."

Willkie characterized the 1848 manifesto as "one of the great historial documents of all time" and said he had read it before he was 21.

(Written by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, the manifesto is a concise statement of scientific socialism according to the views of the authors.)

Willkie's contentions were disputed with equal vigor by Solicitor General Charles Fahy, who argued that the Communist Party in 1927, when Schneiderman obtained his citizenship, "advocated the complete destruction of the existing form of government in the United States."

"This man," Fahy added, "was a Communist and he believed in it. His beliefs were contrary to the principles of the United States Constitution. It could not be said that he was well disposed toward our form of government."

Committee Gets Belmont Tenants' Plea

Senator McCarran, chairman of the Senate District Committee, yesterday turned over for committee study a petition to Congress from the 190 tenants of Belmont Gardens, Inc., that Congress create or designate an agency to operate the boarding house from which they are being evicted April 1.

Tenants are being evicted because of permission granted Mrs. Frederick A. Sterling, majority stockholder, by the Rent Commission to close the eight-building property on which she claims to be losing money. The tenants, most of whom are Government workers, asked Congress to give them priority rights on McLean Gardens if some way of operating the property were not found.

At the same time, the tenant's committee, through the chairman, Miss Dorothy Pickens, OPA employe, wrote to Mrs. Roosevelt requesting her intervention, enclosing a copy of their petition.

The letter said:

"We believe your active interest in this particular case, which has assumed precedent-setting proportions, might assure Belmoint Garden tenants and other war workers faced with similar situations in Washington, some hope for a final and just settlement of an increasingly serious war housing problem."

Justice Wheat's Funeral Rites Set for Today

Funeral services for Retired Chief Justice Alfred Adams Wheat of the United States District Court, who died Thursday, will be held at 2 p. m. today in St. Thomas' Church, 1772 Church Street Northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Representing the District Bar Association at the services will be a committee of past presidents and current officers, comprised of: George E. Hamilton, Michael Colbert, John E. Laskey, James S. Easby-Smith, Leon Tobriner, Henry W. Sohon, Peyton Gordon, Daniel W. O'Donoghue, John Lewis Smith, Jesse C. Adkins, Julius I. Peyser, George P. Hoover, Frank J. Hogan, F. Regis Noel, H. Winship Wheatley, Walter M. Bastian, Henry I. Quinn, Bolitha J. Laws, Godfrey Munter, Sefton Darr, Francis W. Hill, Jr., E. Barrett Prettyman, Paul B. Cromelin, John J. Wilson, J. Edward Burroughs, Jr., Wilbur L. Gray and Milton W. King.

Mary Ross Moen, District Resident, Arrives in Africa

Safe arrival in North Africa of Mary Ross Moen, former Washington resident who was secretary to Dr. Isador Lubin, special assistant to the President, was announced yesterday by the American Red Cross.

Mary Moen

A Red Cross clubmobile worker, Miss Moen, who resided at 601 Nineteenth Street Northwest, will visit isolated outposts where American and Allied troops are stationed.

Miss Moen, an Onawa, Iowa, native, was graduated from Grinnell College, Iowa, and received her B.A. degree from the University of Colorado. Before her work at the White House, she was employed by the NLRB in both Denver and Washington.

Five Army Airmen Are Killed, One Hurt in Va. Bomber Crash

By the Associated Press

Newport News, Va., March 12.—Five Army airmen were fatally injured and a sixth member of the crew of a multi-motored bomber was hurt when the plane crashed near Fox Hill in Elizabeth City County last night.

Col. Eugene Lohman, commanding officer of Langley Field, said today that the dead were:

Maj. Paul M. Person of Mound City, Mo.; First Lieut. Paul A. Kirk of San Antonio, Tex.; First Lieut. Milton R. Montgomery of Chicopee, Mass.; Sergt. Edward W. May of Philadelphia, and Corpl. John M. Keyes of Ontario, Calif.

Corpl. Joseph A. Wood was thrown clear of the falling plane and escaped with slight injuries.

Witnesses reported hearing an explosion and said the ship was in flames when it plunged from a comparatively low altitude.

Missing Bomber Hinted

Greenville, S. C., March 12 (AP).—Planes from the Greenville Army air base and from Meridian, Miss., were conducting a search today for a missing B-25 medium bomber carrying five men.

The crew was listed as follows: Flight Officer Richard S. Brock, 22, pilot, of Lima, Ohio; Second Lieut. Earl S. Monroe, 26, copilot, Bolivar, N. Y.; Second Lieut. Philip J. Graziano, 23, navigator, of Lawrence, Mass.; Staff Sergt. Harvey M. Capellan, 26, engineer, Blanchard, Idaho, and Sergt. Michael Sekel, 29, radio operator, Buffalo, Ohio.

OPA Seeks Court to Hear Complaints

Efforts by OPA Chief Prentiss M. Brown to popularize his agency with everybody from Congressman to housewife are now centered in finding a group of well-known businessmen to serve as a "court" for clearing complaints, it was learned yesterday.

Already the OPA administrator has moved on many fronts to keep ahead of the kind of criticism that laid Leon Henderson low. Among the moves has been the appointment of a "housewife" to serve as consultant, establishment of liaison agents on Capitol Hill, and formation of a special committee to overhaul OPA's structure and personnel.

In addition to these steps, Brown has directed attention toward lifting as many restrictions as possible, among them police enforcement of pleasure driving, and numerous technical changes which have been appreciated.

His latest effort, the court of appeals, will not be a judicial body in the accepted sense, it was learned, but a committee with an understanding of public as well as technical needs. There probably will be six members.

It is not unlikely, according to general belief, that some former Congressman will serve on the committee to help clear congressional complaints.

Brown, a former Senator from Michigan, has so far worked effectively with Congressmen, having already met with members of the Senate Banking and Finance Committee to iron out thinking on price ceilings and rationing. Another move largely for congressional consumption was Brown's announcement two days ago that he has decided "to do more with less" instead of asking for a 23 million dollar deficiency appropriation.

D. C. Pilot Is Wounded In Pacific

Second Lieut. Byron G. Andrews, 22-year-old bomber pilot in the Army Air Forces, has been seriously wounded in action in the Southwest Pacific, it was learned yesterday from his mother, Mrs. Lucille Andrews, 2816 Connecticut Avenue, who was notified by the War Department.

No details were given, but the date on which he was wounded, March 2, led members of his family here to believe that the young flier had taken part in the Battle of the Bismarck Sea.

A graduate of Central High School and a resident of Washington since he was about 9, Lieutenant Andrews has a brother, Bill, who is a prisoner of the Japanese—presumably in Manila, where, as a civilian, he was captured when the Nipponese conquired that Pacific stronghold. A brother-in-law of both is Lieut. Earl Wilson, former Post reporter and now a Marine Corps public relations officer in Hawaii.

Lieutenant Andrews, a native of Archer City, Tex., enrolled at John Tarlton College, a branch of Texas A. and M., following his graduation from Central, and while a student there enlisted in the Army as an air cadet in December, 1941. He trained at San Antonio, received his wings October 9, 1942, went to Florida for training on bombers, and left San Francisco the day after Christmas for Australia.

Members of his family here saw him last in November, when he stopped in Washington for a visit.

District Soldier Wounded in Africa Returns to Duty

One District man was listed as wounded in action in the North African area. Names of casualties in the European, North African and South Pacific fronts were released.

PVT. DEESE

Pvt. First Class James M. Deese of 222 Twelfth Street Southeast reported wounded, has already returned to duty, Army officials informed his mother, Mrs. Sadie L. Cosby, this week. Mrs. Cosby told The Post yesterday that she had received a letter from her son dated February 4 in which he said he was "getting along fine."

Born in Ruby, S. C., Deese, 22, came to Washington five years ago and worked at the Bureau of Standards prior to induction in November, 1941.

Also wounded in North African action were Pvt. Roy L. Harmon of Rockville, Md.; Pvt. William W. Price of Cumberland, Md.; Pvt. Charles L. Taylor of Williamsport, Md., and Pvt. Paul W. Hewitt of Fentress, Va.

Grade Crossings Accidents Grow

Chicago, March 12 (AP)—A mounting toll of accidents at many of the Nation's 230,000 railroad crossings is accompanying the heavy increase in wartime rail traffic, the National Safety Council said today.

The council reported the accidents daily delay an average of 38 trains a total of 22 hours and are seriously retarding transportation of vital war materials. In the past year, 2000 persons were killed and 4700 were injured in grade crossing accidents.

Commissions In WAVES Won By D. C. Girls

Daughters of two Rear Admirals with residences in Washington were members of the class of WAVES which was graduated at the Northhampton Officers' School and assigned to active duty March 9, it was announced yesterday.

MURIEL MORRISSEY

Eloise Walker English, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Robert H. English of 4445 Lowell Street Northwest, and Barbara Ponard, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Ponard of 2310 California Street Northwest, were included in the group of Washington area girls commissioned ensigns in the United States Naval Reserve. Ensign English had served as a junior professional assistant with the Food Distribution Agency of the Department of Agriculture, while Ensign Conrad's most recent work included positions in the chief research unit of the United States Information Center and the procurement division of the Treasury Department.

Also a member of the class was Ensign Mary Madeline Lee, daughter of Commissioner and Mrs. William E. Lee of 5622 Moorland Lane, Bethesda, Md.

Florence Celestia Huhn, 308 C Street Southeast; Ruth Hilliard Schwer, 1731 Twenty-eighth Street Southeast; Mary McGowan Slappey, 4500 Chesapeake Street Northwest; Catherine Birney Strong, 3440 Thirty-fourth Place Northwest; Muriel Mary Morrissey, 2022 Columbia Road Northwest; Dorothy L. Reimer, 1812 K Street Northwest, and Meta A. Ennis, 108 North Columbus Street, Arlington, Va., all commissioned ensigns. Commissioned a lieutenant (j. g.) was Mrs. Thomas J. Doyle, daughter of Mrs. Gurney L. Hunt of 6628 First Street Northwest.

Gas Aplenty Is Assured For Farming

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

The gasoline situation was highlighted yesterday by one order assuring adequate fuel for farmers and another making it practically impossible for applicants to obtain B and C gasoline ration books beginning March 22 without showing membership in car-sharing groups.

As to farmers, Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes lifted limitation on the amount of gasoline which dealers may withdraw from primary storage to enable them to have gasoline on hand for all agricultural purchases.

Last December a limitation on withdrawals from primary storage was imposed by Ickes to prevent dangerous drains upon limited stocks of petroleum in the East. Although stressing that the supply is by no means good now, Ickes pointed out that farm customers must be provided with gas for necessary plowing and planting.

OPA, meanwhile, disclosed that local boards have been instructed to insist that applicants for B and C ration books belong to a full ride-sharing club. If an applicant is not a member, he will be asked to join at once or apply to his local Office of Civilian Defense Council for help in forming a riding group.

If enough riders cannot be found to form a club, OCD may certify this fact to the rationing board. Certifications of transportation committees now organized in most large industrial establishments may also be used by rationing boards as evidence that the applicant cannot get a full club.

In cases where OCD or plant transportation certifications are not available, the applicant must give the rationing board an oral or written explanation as to why he cannot become a member of a car-sharing group.

Persons who cannot find full-time ride sharers may still be able to give some other rider a lift three or four days each week, the OPA instructions pointed out.

Insistence on car-sharing, to help place passenger car mileage on the 5000 miles a year basis recommended in the Baruch Committee report, is part of an intensive drive by OPA Chief Prentiss M. Brown to align driving with developments in the gasoline and rubber situation.

LaGuardia Is Ill

New York, March 12 (AP).—Mayor LaGuardia, who has been absent from his City Hall office for a week, will be confined to his home for another two days at least with a streptococcus infection of the throat, his secretary announced today.

Coal Miners Set Apr. 1 Deadline On Pay Demand

By the Associated Press

New York, March 12.—Spokesmen for various United Mine Workers Union districts today threatened work stoppages April 1 if a contract providing a $2-a-day wage increase for 450,000 mine workers in the Northern and Southern bituminous areas is not signed by March 31.

The threat was made at a meeting of the Joint Northern Appalachian Wage Conference.

John P. Busarello, president of District 5, said "we want $2 (more) a day, and we won't take less. The demands are more than reasonable and the United Mine Workers expects to get them."

Declaring that the operators were "hiding behind the skirts of the War Labor Board," James Mark, spokesman of District 2, said:

"No matter what the Labor Board says or does, if the men don't get a contract by March 31, they won't go into those mines, April 1.

"We're out to get a substantial wage increase and we're going to get it, no matter what the consequences."

John Seddon, spokesman for District 5, told the operators that if the demanded wage increases were not granted many miners would go to other industries. He added:

"From your refusal of our demands could come results drastic and unpredictable."

Earlier, U. M. W. representatives voted down a proposal made by the Southern Coal Producers Association to recess the Southern Appalachian Joint Wage Conference until three months after the end of the war.

The proposal was made earlier today at the start of negotiations for a new contract, by former U. S. Senator Edward R. Burke, president of the producers association.

Maj. Percy Tetlow, president of U. M. W. District 17. West Virginia declared that the miners could not sacrifice their right to a frank discussion of problems, even in the emergency.

He said that the miners had just as much at stake in the war as anyone else, that many of them had sons and even grandsons on the fighting front.

London Notes New Hitler Silence

London (Saturday), March 13. (AP).—Morning newspapers here displayed stories today that Hitler usually made an address on "Heroes' Day" celebrated each year throughout Germany, but that no talk by him had been announced for today's anniversary.

The papers also prominently printed Acting Secretary of State Welles' comment that unconfirmed reports that Hitler was suffering from a complete breakdown had been received.

10 Out of 57 Draft Registrants Win Transfer From Class 1-A

Appeals from Class 1-A were granted to 10 District registrants out of a group of 57 asking transfer from that status during February 12-26, the District Selective Service Board of Appeals announced yesterday. During that period, a total of 61 cases were acted upon.

Of the 10 granted appeals, 7 were placed in Class 3-B, while 1 each were placed in Classes 2-A, 2-B and 3-A. Three cases were referred to the United States district attorney for investigation; four were returned to local boards for additional information.

Transferred to 3-B were:

William S. Shrader, 23, radio mechanic, Wilmotte Laboratory, Inc.; Wallace H. Alexander, 20, attendant, Naval Powder Factory; Henry O. Willier, 32, assistant scientific aide, Bureau of Standards; Michael J. Flattery, 35, civil service examiner, Civil Service Commission; Howard R. Ehrler, 23, multilith supervisor, War Department; Hal S. Tilden, 24, cylinder pressman, GPO, and Lawrence B. Frye, 27, policeman, Metropolitan Police Department.

William James Hammond, 26, a clothing merchant, was granted his appeal from 1-A to 3-A. Regrouped into 2-A for three months was James M. Connor, fingerprint technician, FBI, while Michael J. D'Antuono, 26, machinist, Washington Navy Yard, received a 2-B classification.

Change in status was denied to the following who requested 3-A classifications:

Frederick J. Farris, 21, teletype operator, U. P.; Robert A. Sykes, 19, assistant clerk stenographer, WPB; Franklin W. Hallett, 19, self-employed in making and selling a wholesale bleach; John Russell Smith, 27, general field assistant; Laurence Torreyson, 25, truck driver; Edgar S. Kilby, 27, shipping clerk, Safeway; Rudolph Perry King, 19, messenger, War Department; James E. Holloman, 36, carpenter, Cummins Construction Corp. and Rizgs Distiller; Robert S. Moore, 24, Fred Buischy Co., contractors; William Peter Dorr, 19, serviceman, William E. Kingswell, Inc.; William J. Isengard, 35, structural and reinforced concrete designer, Gulf Oil Co.; Edgar D. Bailey, 36, manager of branch of Rizgs Antique Co.; Arthur Collins, 20, classified laborer, naval Ordnance Laboratory; Isadore Grossman, 21, Gopher Ordnance Plant; Milton H. Waldon, 23, driver and porter, Columbia Wine & Liquor Shop.

Joseph F. Riley, 19, messenger, Social Security Building; Frederick C. Hader, 37, traveling salesman, Kitchen Crafts Food Corp.; Nicholas J. German, 24, freight brakeman, Pennsylvania Railroad; John James Greer, 29, editorial artist, Advertisers' Art Studios; Dominic Joseph Termine, 26, junior clerk, Department of Interior; Lawrence R. Inscoe, 37, manager and buyer for restaurant; Charles A. Pinamore, 24, automotive parts man, Creel Brothers; Bernard Colodny, 29, clerk, Tokay Liquor Store; Joseph R. Holloway, 37, salesman, People's Drug Store; Robert H. Webber, 19, junior laborer, PBA; Jesse William Huddle, 18, steam fitter helper, J. Millard Hall; David Marsh, 26, laborer, Fort Myer; Jasper E. Jenkins, 25, clerk, Washington Gas Light Co.; Frank LoBianco, 18, third assistant reciving engineer, Pullman Co.

Returned to local boards for additional information were the appeals of:

Charles W. Stannard, Jr., 29, United States Air Depot; Charles F. Lautenschlager, 35, maitre d'hotel, Willard Hotel; Edward F. Douglas, 25, joiner, Naval Gun Factory; Paul Buse Pinney, 36, truck driver, People's Drug Store.

Appeals from 1-A to 2-A were denied the following:

Harold Lewis Edwards, 28, complete charge of War Price and Rationing Board; Charles Alden Brown, 33, policeman, Metropolitan Police Department.

Also denied were the following appeals:

Raymond L. Luskey, 21, apprentice machinist, Washington Navy Yard, 1-A to 2-A; Kenneth A. Blackwell, 23, messenger, War Department, 1-A to 3-B; George W. Cook, 21, farm laborer; W. P. Cook, 1-A to 2-C; Gabriel J. Pease, 27, confidential index and files manager, FBI, 1-A to 2-B.

Recommendation of a 60-day stay in induction was given by the board in denying reclassification to the following:

Ray J. Lowrie, Jr., 19, carpenter; Anastasia P. Cubero, 33, taxi driver, Blue Light Co.; John B. Monoch, 27, musician and singer with Eddy Duchin's orchestra; Kenneth A. Russian Oil Wells Resume Production

Moscow, March 12 (AP).—The oil wells of Neftegorsk, 19 miles from Maikop in the Caucasus, have begun functioning and those at Maikop soon will start, Pravda, the government newspaper, said today.

The newspaper repeated previous Soviet reports that the Germans never were able to operate the wells.

Rev. Ira P. Harbaugh's Rites Set Tomorrow in Arlington

Funeral services for the Rev. Ira P. Harbaugh, prominent Arlington County minister, will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at Wilson Boulevard Christian Church, where he was pastor for 19 years. He was 57.

The Rev. William Norment of Hagerstown, Md., will officiate. The body will lie in state in the church from 12:30 p. m. until the funeral hour.

The Rev. Mr. Harbaugh fell dead Thursday night while attending his congregation's choir rehearsal at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rowland.

The minister was a native of Fairfield, Pa., and received his education at Bethany College. He served at Lemoyne (Pa.) Christian Church before coming to Arlington. He was past president and at his death trustee of the Arlington County Ministerial Union and chairman of the county school electoral board.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Carrie Harbaugh, and three children, Earl, a soldier stationed at the Army Medical Center; Harold Harbaugh and Miss Mildred Harbaugh, both of Arlington, and two sisters and two brothers, Elbert Harbaugh and Philip Harbaugh, Gettysburg Pa.; Mrs. Edith Musselman, Harrisburg, Pa., and Mrs. Maude Bream, Kingsport, Tenn.

Burial will be in Columbia Gardens Cemetery.

The Federal Diary

An Open Letter to Congress

When you take home a sack of candy to your children, Mr. Congressman, you don't give one child more than the others, do you? You're smart enough politician not to do that. Moreover, you realize fully that this treatment would make a spoiled brat out of the preferred child and make the others dissatisfied and jealous. A spoiled child disrupts the household and makes life miserable for all concerned. He's never satisfied with equal treatment.

All this may seem elementary, Mr. Congressman, but this is to remind you that Uncle Sam's household—as big as it is—has no room for family favorites, either. And you, Mr. Congressman, are the papa of the vast Government household. It's within your power to hand out the sweets and take them away from the three million civilian workers. Above all you must do it fairly and play no favorites. The fair way is the only way.

What I'm getting at is this: Within the next few days you'll be called upon to pass a bill that would give each postal worker a $300 bonus.

Postoffice committees in both the House and the Senate have reported the bill favorably. Now a $300 bonus appears to be a reasonable thing to do during these times of high prices but do you realize that won't even be half of the increase the postal employe will get if the bill is passed? The $300 merely would be added to his base pay and the postal employe would be paid straight time for the additional eight hours that he's now required to work in first and second class postoffices.

The straight time, taking into account a two-week vacation, would add $344 additional to the postal worker's salary which would be a total wartime increase of $644. The average postal employe is paid somewhere around $2100 and $644 additional is quite a nice boost, don't you think?

Now I wouldn't object in the least if the Congress, after study, would decide to handle the Federal employe pay problem by raising base salaries $300 and pay straight time for hours worked over 40. But it's proposed to extend this benefit only to the postal employes. In other words, you, Mr. Congressman, would set up postal employes as a preferred group in Government. It happens that the Senate Civil Service Committee is now split over whether to recommend a bonus or overtime pay for all other white-collar employes after April 30. The argument is made, and it appears to be waterproof, that all other white-collar employes should be given a $300 bonus like postal employes but I haven't heard one word mentioned about paying them straight time in addition for the extra hours they must work.

Another thing: postal groups say they haven't received a salary adjustment since 1925. It's true they haven't received an increase in base pay rates and neither have any other substantial group of white-collar Federal employes for a long period. However, do you realize, Mr. Congressman, that the postal employe in first and second class postoffices must now work a 48-hour week and that they are paid time and a half for hours worked over 40? And for 50 weeks in a year this eight hours additional each week would run up to $435 for a $2100 employe. Overtime pay, you must remember, Mr. Congressman, is the only adjustment given the great bulk of white-collar employes to help them meet higher living costs.

And another thing, Mr. Congressman, if you pass the $300 bonus bill the Postoffice Department will be removed from Budget Bureau control as provided for all other agencies under the Byrd amendment to the overtime pay act. The Budget Bureau, at the direction of Congress, would then be able to fix personnel limits for all Federal agencies with the exception of the Postoffice Department if the bill is enacted into law.

It's quite clear, Mr. Congressman, as to why the postal employe wants a $300 bonus for himself. He not only wants a bonus, but he would get straight time as well. He now gets time and a half for overtime work which will net him around $435 a year. The bonus-straight time arrangement would net him an average of $222 more than overtime. You hear a lot about the $300 bonus, don't you, Mr. Congressman, but very little indeed has been said about the straight time that would go with it under the compulsory 48-hour work week.

But if you think the bonus straight-time formula is the best solution to the Government's pay problems, then insist, Mr. Congressman, that it be extended to all other white-collar employes. Whatever you do, make it uniform and that makes it fair. We mustn't have any teacher's pets in the Federal service. JERRY KLUTTZ.

Nobles to Gather At Almas Temple Party Tonight

Dress as you please but wear your fez, if a noble, at tonight's Feast of Ramadan, the annual Almas Temple Shrine potentate's party at the Mayflower Hotel, Caliph Jim Effendi Councilor, urged yesterday. The trumpets will sound the call to the 2006th celebration of the feast at 8 o'clock.

Weary travelers will find a haven of rest and refreshments at the oases which will open at 7:30 o'clock, the official announcement continued, and the following stag party will lack none of its usual sumptuousness and Oriental splendor.

Memory Course Prospect

Oklahoma City (INS).—Hugh H. Rogers of Pottstown, Pa., can't remember the name of his wife. Rogers wrote the county marriage license bureau here, stating he had forgotten the name of the person to whom he was married sometime in 1940, and would like to have the same forwarded to him. The bureau obliged, adding the information that his wife had divorced him.

True Americanism

Annapolis, Md. (A.P.).—An appeal for blood donations by legislators was made by John S. White (Democrat), Prince Georges.

Delegate Joseph F. Shane, who is 73, then stated in a voice that broke with emotion, "I don't know how good the blood of an old man like myself will be for a 19-year-old boy in the Army, but I'm willing to give all of mine."

Work Is Begun On Pay Raise Bill

'By Schiaparelli'

Girls Here Told to Shun High Fashion

By Chandler B. Brossard
Post Staff Writer

Mlle. Elsa Schiaparelli, whose very name sends shivers of pure delight from Fifth Avenue salons to the stalls of Bagdhad, visited Washington yesterday and proclaimed that the "Government Girl" will have to go slow on high fashion if she expects to become the ideal office worker.

SCHIAPARELLI

Dressed in an unobtrusive turban and shoes, which contrasted with strings of pearls and bracelets of gold, the Parisian fashion designer came here from New York to formulate plans for lecturing at the Government Girl School for Self-Improvement which will open on March 23 at American University. Mlle. Schiaparelli will give her first lecture April 27 on the wardrobe.

She was interviewed at the office of Dr. Paul Douglass, president of American University, 1901 F Street Northwest, between two educators, two fashion specialists and under heavy guard of Schaparelli perfume. Although there were exciting moments.

Without so much as the stimulation of a French adjective, Mlle. Schaparelli, "Coco" to her intimates, paced the interview by asserting that Government girls must "exercise the utmost discretion" in choosing their clothes, particularly the shoes.

"These office workers must not wear dresses utterly too fashionable," she asserted, "nor utterly too masculine; instead should strike a golden mean with simple but tasteful costume that will not offend their bosses." Mlle. Schaparelli snorted at the suggested of a double upswing curly-do coiffure, even for Saturdays.

Next Mlle. Schaparelli, who assured all that the Government girl did all right with herself, by and large, cried out that "high-heeled shoes are impossible, absolutely impossible."

Asks 10% Increases On D. C. Firemen, Police, Teachers

The House District Committee's new version of local pay raise legislation was introduced yesterday by Chairman Randolph, and committee clerks went to work at once to speed the measure to the floor.

The new bill, drawn up by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, would provide 10 per cent raises for all employes of the District government who do not benefit under the present temporary Federal overtime law. Bulk of those affected will be policemen, firemen and school teachers.

The bill is in the form of an amendment to the current Federal pay bill, extending its flat raise provisions to all local workers who do not come under the Classification Act. Those in the classified service have already received increases.

It would only run until April 30, when further adjustment would be made to match the provisions of any new Federal bill that is enacted after that date. The increases would be limited to 10 per cent of the $2900 portion of any high-salaried worker's pay, and the sum of base pay plus raise could not exceed $5000.

The revision was voted by the McMillan subcommittee which started out to hold hearings on Senate-approved bills granting raises only to the teachers and the police and firemen. The change was prompted by a desire to make the local bill dovetail with Federal legislation, to give higher raises to low-paid police and firemen than were granted by the Senate bill, and to include all local workers.

Randolph said he would report the bill as soon as possible, providing that a poll of the committee now under way shows a favorable majority. The report will probably be filled on Monday, he indicated.

Traffic Accidents Injure Man, Boy

Two persons, a 29-year-old man and a 6-year-old boy, were struck and injured by automobiles yesterday.

Martin R. Norins, 29, of 5429 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, suffered a possible skull fracture, cuts and bruises while Paige Bridges of 417 Evarts Street Northeast had a brain concussion.

The man stepped from a loading zone at Wisconsin Avenue and Yuma Street Northwest into the path of a southbound auto. He was admitted to Georgetown Hospital and last night was reported "improving."

Paige was knocked down near his home and was taken to Sibley Hospital.

Navy Officer's Wife Puts Fifth of Pay Into War Bonds

Mrs. George C. Duncan of 2305 South Pierce Street, Arlington, Va., is the descendant of a long line of Navy men and the wife of a naval lieutenant—two reasons behind her generous contributions to the Treasury Department's payroll savings plan.

MRS. DUNCAN

An employe at the Bureau of Naval Personnel in the District, Mrs. Duncan not only invests 20 per cent of her salary in war bonds but urges her fellow workers to make similar savings.

"If everyone could know as I do what our military men are going through in this war, they would go without everything except the absolute necessities so as to lend their money to help bring the war to a speedy and victorious conclusion," said Mrs. Duncan, whose husband recently received the Air Medal for distinguished service in the Aleutian Islands.

Mrs. Duncan is the granddaughter of Rear Admiral C. Tawresey and daughter of Capt. A. H. Tawresey, assistant budget officer of the Navy.

Figures released yesterday indicated that 88.9 per cent of the Navy Department's 516,476 civilian employes are investing 12.7 per cent of their gross pay in war bonds, maintaining the best enrollment record in the Government.

125 Students Join Red Cross Nurse Corps

One hundred and twenty-five student nurses yesterday received small blue and white pins with a red cross in the center, emblematic of enrollment in the District Red Cross student nurse reserve corps, at a ceremony in the Pan-American Building to commemorate the birth of Jane Delano, founder of the Red Cross nursing service, and organizer of the Army Nurse Corps.

Miss Mary Beard, director of the American Red Cross nursing service, presented the pins to members of the senior classes of nursing schools at Garfield, Providence, Sibley, George Washington, Capital City, St. Elizabeth's and Freedmans Hospitals.

Upon completion of training the girls will exchange their student reserve pins for Red Cross pin. They will be ready for service with the Army and Navy Nurse Corps after graduation.

Members of the motor corps bearing the Red Cross standard led the procession of nurses from the Pan-American Building along Seventeenth Street to the landscaped gardens of the Red Cross Building to place a wreath on the memorial of Jane Delano, who was born on March 12 80 years ago and died in the line of duty in France in 1919.

Stover Loses Appeal In Insurance Case

William H. M. Stover, secretary treasurer of the National Hospital Service Society, recently convicted in Municipal Court for violation of the District insurance company licensing laws and fined $500 yesterday lost his appeal to the Municipal Court of Appeals to review his case.

Girls Train to Be Raid-Time Fire Spotters

Defense Unit Gets 4 Women Fire Watchers

The fairer sex is moving in again.

And this time, bless them, they're welcome in the ranks of civilian defense as fire watchers—something this city needs in large numbers.

Four recruits showed up yesterday atop the People's Life Building, Fourteenth and H Streets Northwest, to lend their aid to Zone R of the Mid-City Area, which is trying to get 350 more watchers in addition to the 150 already enrolled.

"We're very glad to get women," said John L. C. Sullivan, deputy warden of the area. "We lose a lot of our men as fast as they are trained, and others are working so long that they find themselves unable to fully perform their civilian defense work." His views were echoed by Mrs. Mary E. McDaniel, warden for Zone R, who has been working on the project voluntarily for three months.

Duties of fire watchers, as the name indicates, are to watch for incendiary bombs during air raids and, from their perches atop high buildings, to report the locations of any fires spotted to other defense officials. And they're needed, not only in the midcity area, but all over town, according to Heywood Saunders, assistant chief air raid warden in charge of fire watchers.

Yesterday's recruits, anxious to do their bit, were Mrs. Rose Reed and Misses Hildur Peterson, Audrey Roby and Seville Roby, the latter two cousins. All work in the People's Life Building.

Jefferson Dix Funeral Rites to Take Place Today

Funeral services for Jefferson Davis Dix, sr., 80, a native of Accomac, Va., who died Thursday at the home of his daughter, Miss Adele Dix, 2752 Woodley Place, Northwest will be held today at 2:30 p.m. at the Hines Funeral Parlors, 14th and Harvard Streets, Northwest. Burial will be at Glenwood Cemetery.

Surviving are three daughters Adele Dix and Helene E. Dix of Washington and Mrs. Dorothy Dix Steiger of Portland, Ore.; and three sons John E., Jefferson D., Jr., and Milton E. Dix, all of Washington, and six grandchildren.

Beginning Today

OPA Boards Shut at 12:30 Saturdays

Beginning today the 15 local war price and ration boards will be closed to the public at 12:30 p. m. every Saturday, Robert K. Thompson, acting manager for the District of Columbia Office of Price Administration, announced yesterday.

Closing the boards to the public for a half-day each Saturday until further notice, Thompson said, is necessitated by the fact that the boards are now overloaded with the processing of thousands of applications of various kinds.

"This step," he said, "will give boards' personnel time to catch up with this work and will result in quicker service to the public."

Mullins in Defense Post

James A. Mullins has been appointed assistant director of defense and welfare services of region 4, Lavinia Engle, regional director, announced yesterday. Serving the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, the services' activities center around the following undertakings: Child care, education, recreation, social protection, nutrition, public health and sanitation.

Greek Theme Is Highlight

"Greek Month of March" will be commemorated at a luncheon of the United Nations Club at Hotel 2400 at 1 p. m. today. Miss Meredith Howard will introduce Capt. Alfred Leondopoulos, Greek naval attache, and Col. Eugene Villaret, former United States military attache in the Balkans, as speakers of the day.

Girl Reserves will appear in a Greek dance at 2:30 p. m. at Greek War Relief headquarters, 1218 Connecticut Avenue, where a Greek exhibit is open to the public.

WAAC Course Over

Auxiliary Bobbie F. Walters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Walters, 840 Ridge Road Southeast, has completed her basic training at the First WAAC Training Center, Fort Des Moines, and has been sent to the Midland Radio School, Kansas City, Mo., for specialist training. She is a graduate of Eastern High School and attended Wilson Teachers College and George Washington University. She was employed in the transport division of the State Department prior to her enlistment January 30.

W. S. Herman, Jr.'s, Rites Tomorrow In Silver Spring

Funeral services for William Scott Herman, jr., 35, employe of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. for 11 years, will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the Warner Pumphrey funeral home, 8434 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring, Md. The Rev. Ernest Bryan, pastor of the Takoma Christian Church, will conduct the service. Burial will be private.

A former resident of Silver Spring, Mr. Herman and his family moved two weeks ago to the home of his father, William Scott Herman, 7015 Fifth Street, Takoma Park, D. C. He died Thursday after an illness of five months.

Born in Newport News, Va., Mr. Herman came to Washington when a child. He was a repair man for the telephone company. He leaves besides his father, his wife, Mrs. Shirley Herman, and a daughter, Ina.

City News in Brief

In a move to relieve traffic congestion on Pennsylvania Avenue between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets Northwest, the PUC last night ordered Seventeenth Street to be the most westerly street on the Rhode Island bus line. Henceforth, the southern loop of the bus line will go from Madison Place to Pennsylvania to Jackson Place to Connecticut Avenue thence along Seventeenth Street to Rhode Island Avenue.

Fall From Engine Fatal

Injured in a fall from a locomotive, Wednesday, Edward A. Meyers, 34, of 317 A Street Northwest, a machinist for the Washington Terminal Co., died at Emergency Hospital yesterday of a fractured skull. Meyers was working atop the engine at the Ivy City roundhouse and fell about 15 feet, it was said. A certificate of accidental death was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Gewiski, director of publicity.

Rankin to Be Honored

Brig. Gen. Fred W. Rankin, president of the American Medical Association, will be awarded the honorary degree of doctor of laws at the Temple University School of Medicine commencement Tuesday. Rankin, a graduate of the University of Maryland School of Medicine, will also be the commencement speaker. Dr. W. Wayne Babcock, professor of surgery at Temple, will confer the degree.

Government Rests In Gas Rate Case

$1,500,000 Cut Demanded as OPA Closes Evidence

By Roger Young
Post Staff Writer

A demand for a rate reduction of $1,500,000 closed the Government's presentation of its preliminary evidence—much of which was not admitted to the record—in the Potomac Electric Power Co. rate hearings before the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

Company witnesses will take the stand this morning to begin testimony in support of its contention that no such drastic cut could be allowed. In the prehearing conferencess, Pepco counsel suggested that it would offer exhibits proving that under the sliding scale the rates should remain constant during the ensuing year. But District Building observers believed that the company might well accede to the PUC calculation of a $315,000 rate reduction to ward off the Government slash of $1,500,000.

Yesterday's session was the most turbulent one in the two week's course of the hearings, as exhibit after exhibit offered by OPA counsel as evidence were ruled out on grounds of irrelevancy or that the computations were derived by applying arbitrary and irrelevant formulas to the figures appearing in the company's annual report to the PUC.

Asks Records Be Stricken

Toward the close of the day Minority PUC Member Gregory Hankin demanded that two exhibits, prepared by PUC accountants at his request, be read into the record as "stricken." These tables, which were ordered excluded in the prehearing conference, were calculated in the same way as the stricken OPA exhibits—by applying 19 per cent income tax rate to the 1942 operating expenses instead of the 31 per cent allowed by the PUC and by applying a 6 per cent "sinking-fund" depreciation basis instead of the 2½ per cent specified in the sliding scale arrangement.

Government counsel insisted that the sinking fund basis for depreciation rates was decreed by the Supreme Court in the Natural Gas Pipe Line Co. case in March 16, 1942, and hence should be applied in the present rate adjustments. S. R. Bowen, Pepco counsel, objected that the cases were entirely different, since the Natural Gas Pipe Line resources would be depleted in 1954 and the Pepco resources were continuous: Therefore the depreciation ruling for the former had no bearing on the Pepco rate base. The PUC sustained this objection, Hankin dissenting.

Besides having much of its evidence declared irrelevant, OPA witnesses were challenged on their qualifications to testify. Mark Wolff, New York accountant employed by the OPA on a per diem basis, offered exhibits relating to the earnings of the dividends paid Pepco stockholders and to depreciation reserves. Under severe questioning by Bowen, Wolff admitted that he had spent only one week studying the case, that he had never before testified in a case involving the sliding scale, and that he had no engineering training, which was held to be a usual qualification of witnesses testifying for changes in depreciation allowances.

Exhibit Assailed

A exhibit entered on Thursday by Treasury accountants was vigorously attacked by William K. Laws, Pepco counsel, who held that while it purported to compare the cumulative earnings of the company in the 17 years of the sliding scale arrangement, with the cumulative benefits given consumers in the form of rate cuts, actually the rate reduction figures were not cumulative at all and that therefore the comparison was absurd. It was further brought out that the table made no allowance for the fact that the lower the rates became the more consumers were able to use power, and hence the volume of consumption consistantly increased.

This was brought out again in answer to a statement by Wolff that in computing rates, the only thing to be considered was the amount of profit made, with no consideration of cost of production or volume of business.

Six Washington policemen and a two-way radio system ganged up on a 22-year-old escaped convict early yesterday and captured him in an automobile taken in a robbery which netted only $2.40.

PEABODY

The suspect, George Lee Peabody, who surrendered without using a .22-caliber revolver in his possession, admitted he rode to freedom in a laundry bag from the Richmond Penitentiary, January 22, the police said. He was serving 45 years for three cases of robbery in Loudoun County, police said.

Victim of yesterday's robbery, police said, was Adrian Newman, 35, of Fairfax, Va. He said he picked up Peabody as a hitchhiker. In Falls Church, he related, the youth produced a gun, took $2.40 and his automobile.

Newman rushed to a telephone and notified police but Peabody managed to escape from the county. His description and the car's tag numbers were flashed to Washington and the local dispatcher ordered all Virginia bridges covered.

Somehow Peabody managed to cross the Potomac River into the city, but soon was detected speeding north on Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Policemen William Elliott and O. J. Schelin, First Precinct, fell in behind him and broadcast their course over two-way radio.

A Traffic Division car occupied by Privates Bernie E. Buscher, former Maryland University football star, and P. J. Musoff, intercepted the fleeing machine at Thomas Circle. At Vermont Avenue, Peabody was thrown for a loss. He submitted to arrest without a struggle.

Buscher and Musoff took him to the First Precinct just as Detective Sergts. William Christian and Frank Ashley arrived. Peabody identified himself as "James R. Wacey of Denton, Md.," and produced a draft registration card to prove it.

But Christian had in his pocket a rogue's gallery picture of Peabody, the fugitive. At first denying he was Peabody, the suspect later admitted the detective was right and related how he was carried from the prison in a lanudry bag. The draft card came from the prison print shop where they are made, he said.

He was held last night for investigation into recent District holdups and for questioning by Virginia county authorities.

Senate Acts To Save D. C. $25,000

Steps were taken yesterday to save the District $25,000 when the Senate passed an amendment to the first deficiency bill declaring that the District did not have to pay that sum to the Federal Government as its share of repair of flood damages to the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal.

The amendment was offered from the floor by Senator McCarran, veteran chairman of the Senate District Committee, in connection with an appropriation of $110,000 for repairs on the historic old canal necessitated by severe damage in floods last fall.

"I am at a loss to know why the District should pay any of the cost of those flood repairs," McCarran said. He pointed out that the Federal Government, through the National Capital Parks, has title to the property and derives $27,000 annual revenue from it. Two Georgetown mills pay $22,000 for power rights, and property owners along the canal pay the other $5,000.

Since the House earlier had passed the bill providing that the District be assessed $25,000 the matter will be settled by conferees. The assessment had been included because the canal has become a secondary source of water for the District in case of bombing or other emergency.

Stronger Faith Needed in War, Preacher Says

War conditions will call for stronger belief in providential guidance of individual Christians, the Rev. Carlyle B. Haynes, secretary of the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists War Service Commission, told local youths of the denomination last night at the opening service of a week of prayer conducted in the Takoma Park Seventh-day Adventists Church.

100% COTTON

By Jeanne Contini

This suit was designed for sunlight. It's cool, crisp, and sparkling. It tailors to a "t" and is beautifully finished. It comes in a very small shepherd check . . . navy or black on white. The white faille collar is detachable. The buttons are shiny like licorice. As a suit it looks and hangs like wool.

The fabric is 100% pure cotton . . . and a better investment for wear now and through the early summer we would be hard put to discover. This is one of the few cotton suits in our experience that will actually stand up and behave as well as wool, and therefore can take with equanimity the same gamut of accessories.

You can wear it now under your coat with all kinds of blouses. Later, when the weather is warm, ring in your changes with gilets.

We wish we could recommend washing without any reservations, but, while it is possible, the average douse in a basin will not do it justice and few people have the time or inclination to accord it the proper care. Cleaning is strongly advised.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

"It seems unbelievable that it should be necessary to clarify the word 'persons' as used in an act passed as recently as September 22, 1941," declared Dr. Helena T. Ratterman of Concinatti, president of the American Medical Women's Association, at a tea given by the National Woman's Party this week at 144 B Street Northeast.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

This remark was provoked by the Army's interpretation of "qualified persons." The Army takes it to mean men, and that's why eminent women doctors from all parts of the United States now are in Washington watching a bill, now in the Military Affairs Committee, which if passed will give women doctors an equal opportunity to serve in the Army as part of the regular staff.

So naturally at the National Woman's Party tea given in their honor, there was quite a heated discussion of Equal Rights . . . the baby as it were of the National Woman's Party.

No doubt, Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the National Woman's Party, who was hostess at the tea, used the impending bill as an effective argument to interest the American Medical Women's Associations in fighting for the Equal Rights Amendment. If she didn't, then she missed a good chance. Assisting Miss Paul were Mrs. Maria Heldring Bye of the Netherlands and the United States and Mrs. Dora Ogle, business manager of Equal Rights magazine, who poured.

Among the doctors attending the tea were Dr. Emily Dunning Barringer of New York City, chairman of the A. M. W. A., special committee to obtain commissions for women physicians; Dr. Zoe Johnson, Pittsburgh, president-elect of the American Medical Women's Association, who will take office in July; Dr. Helen Schrack, Camden, N. J., director of the North Atlantic Region.

Also Dr. Elaine P. Ralli, associate professor of medicine, New York University College of Medicine; Dr. Katherine Whitten, Fort Wayne, Ind., and Dr. A. M. Muhl, who returned recently from Australia.

Doings of the Day

Col. John Donelson Chapter, D. A. R., meets 3 p. m. at Chapter house . . . North Carolina Democratic Club of Washington features musical program at banquet, 7 p. m., Statler Hotel. N. C. Hines, president of the club, presides. Honored guests, in addition to congressional members and their wives, include Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Albert L. Cox, Gen. Luther S. Smith, Col. and Mrs. Kenneth Royall, former North Carolina Gov. O. Max Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Brent Drake and many others . . . League for the Larger Life holds "United Nations Party," 9 p. m. at headquarters, 1322 Vermont Avenue Northwest.

Bits of This and That . . .

Senor Jorge Cardenas of Colombia, special adviser to the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, spoke on "Colombia de las Tres Andes" last night at the monthly dinner meeting of the Pan American Good Neighbor Forum . . . Mrs. Mary B. Corwin, Chapeau Departmental, D. C. Eight and Forty, was the recipient of many eulogies and gifts recently when the organization put on a gala dinner in celebration of her birthday at the American Legion Clubhouse. In fact, Chef Joseph Mallet baked a cake especially for the occasion. Among others coming in for special recognition and flowers was Mrs. Ellen Louise Warren, ardent worker and past national chapeau of the Eight and Forty. Next meeting scheduled for the Washington group is Wednesday, March 17, at the Washington Hotel. Guest speaker will be Mrs. Franz T. Stone . . . Thirty-six members of the Seventy-eighth Congressional Club held their first luncheon Tuesday at the Kennesaw. Mrs. Albert E. Carter, chairman of the Bond and Stamp Drive, made a plea for volunteers and Mrs. Walter H. Judd discussed China from the standpoint of an educator. Mrs. Harris Ellsworth, president, presided . . . Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard will give her final lecture at the Sulgrave Club Tuesday morning, 11:30 o'clock. She will give definite ideas on woman's place in the war under the intriguing title "Deborah—1943 Model" . . . Elaine Langerman, 14-year-old Camp Fire Girl of 5122 Ninth Street Northwest, is receiving congratulations for her poem, "Let's Mow, Mow the Lawn," which won an award in the eighth annual poetry contest.

Did You Know That . . .?

Members of the Washington Business and Professional Women's Club are in a jubilant mood—all because their chairman of the public affairs committee, Miss Kinsella, has been named to the same post on the staff of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Harriet P. Tyler, president of the American Federation of Soroptimist, dropped in unexpectedly at the local Soroptimist Club's luncheon Wednesday at the Willard Hotel.

Incidentally, the Washington Saddle Club is sponsoring group rides which are open to non-members. These rides are held each Sunday—in addition there's a "moonlight" ride scheduled for Wednesday night, March 17. Treasurer of the club—telephone ADams 7059—is ready to give all details.

So popular were the farming courses given by the American Women's Voluntary Services that Mrs. Dean Acheson, chief of the agricultural section, and Mrs. Mieczyslaw Nowinski, chairman of the land army committee, are offering another evening course beginning Wednesday, March 17, 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock, at A. W. V. S. headquarters. The course, planned and supervised by the College of Agriculture, University of Maryland, includes dairying, poultry raising, growing of fruits and vegetables.

Notables to Be Guests

Tomorrow's calendar is chocked full of interesting places to go and things to do. To mention but a few—Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai, Agent General for India, Lady Bajpai and her two attractive daughters, Krishna and Bhagwati, will be honored guests at the D. C. League of American Pen Women's tea, 4 to 7, in the league's studio, 1851 Columbia Road Northwest. Dr. H. I. Poleman of the Asiatic Division, Library of Congress, will talk on "Indian Literature." He will be introduced by Miss Ann Singleton, Non-Fiction chairman . . . Walsh Club holds talent night stunts, including singing, dancing and "emoting," 7:30 to 10 o'clock at clubhouse, rear 1523 Twenty-second Street Northwest. . . . Arts Appreciation Group, Washington Branch of American Association of University Women, presents "Un Petit Concert" in lounge of clubhouse, 8 p. m. . . . Washington Catholic Poetry Society meets 3 p. m. in Study Guild of St. Matthews Cathedral. Dr. Sean Sheahan, Irish scholar, discusses the life and poetry of Owen Rose O'Sullivan, Irish poet of the nineteenth century. Dr. Sheahan, a native of Ireland, is a recognized authority on ancient and modern Irish literature. Others appearing on the program are Miss Agnes J. Du Breil and Father John Duffy, C. SS. R. chaplain of the Washington Poetry Society.

Imitation Marriage

CHAPTER IV

Hey, you!" Scott yelled.

The girl was making the tussle worth while, Scott noted. She was kicking violently and using her hands in a silent, tearing fury that seemed to charge the air with hate.

Scott crowded close and swung a tight-balled fist in a swift descending arc. There was the welcoming thud of bone on flesh and an answering, surprised grunt. He had taken them unaware. So intent had they been upon their quarry that the possibility of interference had not occurred to them.

Scott lunged savagely forward, realizing his advantage and determined to capitalize upon it. His blocky shoulder bent downward, driving into the stomach of the nearest man. And then something hit him a stunning blow on the cheekbone. Scott straightened, his mind stunned for a fraction of a second, but he managed to bring his head up with a hard jerk. A paralyzing shock ran through his body as the top of his head caught a man's jaw. Scott felt his eyes spin in their sockets. The sidewalk was tilting crazily. In a blur Scott realized that the girl was still standing, watching, fascinated by what she saw.

"Quick!" Scott jerked out. "Get up the street—under that light, and yell for help!" He brought his attention squarely on his opponents, for now the two men were converging on him inexorably.

The girl moved out of Scott's line of vision as though propelled by his words. At least, Scott thought with satisfaction, she will get out of this.

He set himself, long legs slightly spread, wide-shouldered body hunched belligerently, knowing what could happen now. These two men appeared used to this type of brawling. Scott realized once again that his initial success could be credited to surprise.

The man before him leaped, his hands clawing out. Scott ducked, coming up under the wildly flailing arms. He let drive a big fist and it plunged into the other's broad stomach. The breath exploded from the man's mouth and his tall body jackknifed. Scott brought his knee up sharply and caught the man flush upon the chin.

Not exactly ethical, Scott thought grimly; but certainly efficient. And then he was thrown sideward, the weight of the smaller man bearing him down. He felt a leg entangled in his and then he lost balance. He lurched, losing his footing and finally sprawling on his hands and knees. He turned his head and was in time to see a foot swinging in a deadly arc. He tried to roll with the blow, but he was too late. The heavy boot landed against his side ribs and the force of it threw him upon his face. He could feel his breath rush between his lips; a crushing weight seemed to be pressing against his eardrums. Just then, from far off, there came the long roll of a police whistle. Three blasts and close by an answer. Then the pound of approaching feet.

A harsh voice rasped out: "The police! Quick, Kurt, out of here!"

Heavily, Scott lifted his head, braced his hands upon the cement sidewalk. The quick beat of heels upon the sidewalk told him that his adversaries were escaping.

Scott labored for breath. The blow to his ribs had almost paralyzed him. But, miraculously, right there before his eyes, stood a huge, black pair of shoes.

Scott lifted his head. He grunted: "I'll be all right in a minute." A pair of strong arms circled his chest and heaved him to his feet. A light flashed in his face.

"Shouldn't do that." Scott murmured critically. Almost apologetically the light went out. "Bad for the dimout," Scott finished.

"Where's your pals?" The policeman was holding Scott upright. By now strength was returning slowly to his leg muscles.

Scott answered: "They couldn't be my pals, could they? Wouldn't fight with a pal." Scott looked up carefully. He asked quickly: "Where is the girl? Did you see her?"

The policeman's gruff voice was ominous. "Girl? There's no girl around here. What're you talking about?"

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain

A woman is apparently ready and willing to believe almost anything she hears about weight. One of the most persistent notions to go the rounds is that some certain food, or combination of foods, is to blame for the excess pounds.

But women who go for years without eating bread or potatoes or having sugar in their coffee are often the ones who never lose an ounce. Cutting out one food does not necessarily lower the calorie intake for the day enough below the energy needs to affect the weight. Usually, that is not enough to make much difference in the day's total calories.

If you are puzzled by what you hear about calories and pounds, don't imagine you are the only one. You have plenty of company. One lady wrote that, "I know an apple and a potato each count 100 calories, but my friends insist a potato is more fattening." When the calorie count is the same, one food couldn't possibly be more fattening than another. The calorie count is simply the measure of the energy furnished by a food. You either use that energy, or you store it. But you only store it when the calories furnished exceed your needs.

The liquid diet still has its followers, and it is hard to figure out why. You can get just as many calories in liquids as you can in solid foods—and nothing makes you hungrier for a good meal than three days on liquids.

A great many overweights declare they eat only "one decent meal a day"—and yet they gain. They are sure there must be something very wrong with their glands or metabolism. But it is more likely that they are managing to get an astounding number of calories in that "one decent meal," so many that they can't be used up in energy in the whole day. The best way to keep the calorie total down is to eat three low-calorie, balanced meals.

Someone is always asking how it is that water, which contains no calories, can be a factor in weight, and why shouldn't it be taken with meals. There are a couple of reasons. It washes off the taste buds and whets the appetite for more food. Also, large quantities of liquid with food stretch the stomach. Limit all mealtime liquid to eight ounces. If you have a soup, a hot beverage, or milk, do not drink any water.

Another question that bobs up at intervals is why starch is more fattening at night than in the morning. It isn't. That's ridiculous. An ounce of starch—bread, potatoes, cereal or spaghetti—counts 113 calories, no matter what time it is.

Not long ago a distraught overweight asked why it is she weighs 256 pounds in the morning and 258 at night, and which should she take as normal. Weight often varies as much as two pounds in a day and, if it is any consolation, the low weight is the one to take. But that amount of weight is far from normal. It is a burden. The excess pounds should be used up by restricting the menus to the protective foods and the calorie intake to two-thirds the day's requirement.

THE GENTLER SEX

The Party Guests

By Malvina Lindsay

The one who is rushing hither and yon saying "Hello darling," to everyone and never really looking at anyone.

The two on either side of you who are old chums and who spend their time talking across you about "Dot" and "Diz" and "Chuck" and other persons you never heard of, and about a certain party they both attended last week which was a wow.

The one who is set off on the slightest provocation with a store of incidents including factual data, as names, dates, etc., about what happened when Junior was 4 years old and they were living in Kankakee, etc.

The one who when introduced looks at you with a fishy eye and then makes no effort to carry on the conversation.

The one who babbles on constantly about herself and never asks you anything about yourself.

The one who talks to you with her eyes roving constantly about the room to sight someone more important.

The ones in your group who suddenly have their attention diverted elsewhere as you are just in the middle of an anecdote with the result that you find yourself telling your story into space.

The one with whom you find yourself in forced tete-a-tete and who doesn't bother to carry on her part of the conversational load; in fact, doesn't even say "Yes?" with interest.

The one who is constantly talking about the food; the one who is constantly talking about the flower arrangements; the one who is constantly talking about nothing.

The ones — bless 'em — who look you in the eyes with a real warmth and friendly interest when you are introduced and who remember not only your face but your name the next time they meet you . . . who gently draw you out about your children, your husband, your home town, your State, your achievements, and above all, your ambitions . . . who listen sympathetically and patiently to your long stories and anecdotes and laugh heartily at your wit . . . who seem genuinely interested in drawing the best out of you instead of showing off the best of themselves . . . who encourage and stimulate and inspire you and send you home with a light step and a feeling that after all you may amount to something.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Mrs. Wyncoop Bigwigger, Truthtown's ace hostess, has lost her title as the woman to whom nobody ever says "No." The handicaps of food rationing and the drafting of her chef have seriously affected Mrs. Bigwigger's cuisine, with the result that she is now, for the first time, receiving regrets to her "command" invitations. Huntington Rhinestone, man about town, gourmet and collector of eighteenth century spittoons, who formerly was a regular extra man at Mrs. Bigwigger's dinners, has appeared frequently lately at the parties of Mrs. Parvenu Popinjay. (Mrs. Popinjay has not as yet been socially recognized by Mrs. Bigwigger.)

Mr. Rhinestone last night, speaking off the record over a telephone from his Turkish bath, said he had been dining at the Popinjays because of the steaks served there, and that against this Mrs. Bigwigger could offer only lobster and champagne. Mrs. Popinjay, it is understood, has been having cocktail rendezvous with a prominent butcher of the town. As soon as meat rationing goes into effect Mrs. Bigwigger expects to regain her former social clientele.

Anti-Hottentots

Mrs. Adam Stalactite has come out of her retirement to permit the use of her name to head a committee issuing a call for a mass meeting at the Hotel Swank to oppose milk drinking by Hottentots. In a typewritten statement issued to the press through her houseman, Mrs. Stalactite said: "I have been deeply aroused by the report that in the post-war world Hottentots may receive a quart of milk a day. As one whose forebears took this country from the Indians, I do not propose to turn over our milk supply to the Hottentots. Moreover, I feel that those people should learn to dress decently before expecting to be fed." It is understood that Mrs. Stalactite and her group will seek to have an anti-Hottentot bill introduced to Congress by Senator Pettifogger.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Apples are a blessing in the days of rationed foods. Margaret Speaks grows apples on her farm. She gives suggestions on this page for preparing apple dishes. Baked apples are one of her favorite dishes. She now uses honey instead of sugar for sweetening them.

"Apples are among my favorite foods," says Margaret Speaks, distinguished soprano of concert and radio, who will be the guest soloist at the 15-30 concert of the National Symphony Orchestra at Constitution Hall tonight.

MARGARET SPEAKS

This fruit is one that Miss Speaks grows on her little 12-acre farm, 50 miles from New York. She planted a baby orchard a number of years ago, transplanted the trees, pruned them, sprayed and picked the fruit herself. She says that she gets a great deal of pleasure in cooking the things she grows on her farm. Now that fresh fruit is so valued she is fortunate in having the apple jelly she made from last year's crop, and the thought that she will have the fruit this harvest season.

This soloist likes to cook. She told me of the following ways she uses apples in her cookery. Since we do have a fairly good supply of apples available, the following recipes which Miss Speaks uses will no doubt be good suggestions for all cooks.

These recipes were given before the order of cheese rationing came out. However, you may have enough cheese at present to try her suggestion for cheese apples:

GRAHAM APPLES

Butter the bottom of a medium sized pan. Roll a dozen graham crackers and spread them in the pan. Cover with two cups of coarse applesauce. Sprinkle a little sugar and cinnamon on the top. Put in a hot oven for 20 minutes or a half hour. The bottom will be crisp and the top brown. It will serve four people.

CHEESE-APPLE

Take three thin slices of an apple. Spread one thin with blue cheese, spread another thickly with cream cheese and place on top of first slice. Then cap with the third slice. One portion.

APPLES SAUTE

Peel, core and quarter four apples. Place in a flat baking dish. Pour over them a half cup of sugar and a half cup of honey mixed, add three-quarter cup of water. Bake for 45 minutes. Then sprinkle with juice of one lemon and a litle sugar. Brown under a broiler until the top edges crisp. Serves four people.

OHIO WONDER

Brown in butter quarter-inch-thick slices of bread, one for each person to be served. Place on each slice four quarters of cooked apple. (Any other fruit or berries can be used for this.) Add cinnamon and honey and put under broiler for a few minutes. In pre-war days this was served with whipped cream.

APPLE SANDWICHES

These do not make a dessert, but they are excellent with afternoon tea. Put thin slices of apple between thin slices of buttered bread.They are as refreshing and appetizing as watercress or cucumber.

Memo to Miss Brown

SUBJECT: The Woman With the Hoe

Swathe your expanding hips in overalls, Miss Brown, and get a more-than-passing acquaintance with the Land Army! Even while the halls of Congress are echoing groans of "Where is the Nation's food going to come from?" the women of Washington are following the example of British and Russian women and quietly taking up the plow and harrow.

The American Women's Voluntary Services here has organized a plan for getting the Capital's food growers (in nearby Maryland and Virginia) into full production by sending bus-loads of enthusiastic desk-chair-sitters out to the farms on Sundays and during their vacations. When Abner or Si is faced with the prospect, for instance, of picking an orchard full of apples single-handed, he calls the A. W. V. S. and they gather a group together to help him out—at the prevailing wage for the particular type of work to be done. So, you see, it's possible to be patriotic, get back to the soil, take advantage of the sunshine, and earn extra money—all at the same time.

They say that, although house wives and young people are going in for part-time farming in a big way, the real stand-bys of the local farmers are the Government girls (they even beat the Government men—who are also a substantial part of the land army). Perhaps that girl with nice rosy cheeks who sits next to you is one of the many who have been helping on farms, Sundays, since last fall when the Army really got under way here. The farmers are enthusiastic about the way the gals picked apples and peaches last fall—and the gals are likewise over the fun they had in the process.

Now it is spring planting time, and soon some vegetables will be ready for harvesting. Already plans are being made for a bigger and better Land Army this year.

With the aid of two professors of Agriculture from the University of Maryland, the A. W. V. S. has been conducting courses in farm skills, free, for those who want to know a weed from a lima bean before they start to work. The courses last for six weeks—meet every Wednesday evening at 7:30 and cover such vital points as poultry, horticulture, harvesting and picking of fruit and berries, general farming, today's farm problems, and dairying. If a call for workers is received at A. W. V. S. headquarters, members of the class may be asked to go to work—even though they haven't had all six classes. So the course is really a combination of lectures (with movies and such) and practical work. Classes are held at the A. W. V. S. Center, 2170 Florida Avenue Northwest.

The next class will get going on March 17 if enough girls want to join it. So you see, it's all up to you. The professors are ready and willing, providing you come out to learn. Lose no time in calling DUpont 1478, Extension 10, to register for the class or to get further information on the Land Army.

If you have your own garden, or have friends who like to have you come and putter on their farm, you can learn a lot from this course. If you have visions of a little home in the country with the man of your dreams after the war, then come along and find out about cows and chickens and broccoli from those who know. You do not necessarily have to go out to "farm" through the A. W. V. S. program—anyone who can put the knowledge to good use is welcome to join the class, for any farming anywhere is directed toward the same objective—growing the Nation's food supply.

If you have such a lot of fun on now-and-then Sunday excursions into farming that you want a larger dose, you can make arrangements to spend a part or all of your vacation on a farm this summer (and get paid for it, to boot!) If you are so enthusiastic that you want to become a farmerette for the duration—as some have done—sign up for the intensive three-week daytime course at the University of Maryland (tuition and maintenance free.)

From a perfectly selfish point of view, working on a farm every other Sunday or so is great fun and wonderful exercise. Fresh air, they tell me, is as good a glamorizer as mud packs, and raking and hoeing are sure death to avoirdupois.

From the point of view of a war-conscious citizen, the Land Army is a great and spontaneous movement, primarily of women, to aid in solving one of the home front's most vital problems. Call the A. W. V. S. today and tell them you want to help!

THE NEW BOSS OF THE FAMILY

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

What does it take to make over just any room into a nursery fit for His Majesty? Well, first, of course, it takes His Majesty himself, and the necessary, basic equipment he needs to keep him comfortable and healthy. These include a sizable work space for dressing, bathing, weighing, and the like, a crib or bassinette for sleeping, a screen for protection against drafts, an off-the-door pen for playing (when he's old enough), a cabinet for supplies, a chest for clothes, a comfortable low chair for mother (feedings take time, you know), reliable scale, folding drying rack, low floor lamp, plus any fancy decorative notions you must indulge in . . . keeping them in their place, however, since baby won't really care whether walls are pink or purple, as long as he is comfortable.

The basic supplies must come first on your list, of course. And these days, young mothers must go in for "share-the-wealth" plans, since almost all baby equipment will be on the hard-to-come-by list shortly. Metalles carriages are being manufactured; a limited supply of rubber has been released for nipples (but none for rubber panties); metal scales will be "out" for the duration. But the borrowing method is quite satisfactory (as it has been for years), for no one baby ever was able to use up a crib or a carriage

Nursery Colors

As for the decorative didoes you'll want for your baby, priorities may put some crimp in your style, but imagination can make up for many a scarcity. Pink and blue are still favorite nursery colors—although yellow is sunny and crisp, too. Consider painting the ceiling and one wall in pale blue (set the pink bassinette against the blue wall) and the other walls a delicate shell pink. Or why not an all-white nursery with white walls and ceiling, white cotton rug on the floor (easily laundered), stiff white ruffled curtains and white furniture. Baby's clothing and person have plenty of color anyway, and the white background will look both clinical and restful.

Nursery patterned wallpaper is, of course, one way to solve the decoration question for the baby at one fell swoop, but you want to be careful in your selection—some patterns are too busy for a restful room — and even baby may find a solid array of boats or toys a little on the monotonous side! A ceiling of blue starred paper might be just enough wallpaper and not too much . . . or a border used low around the wall will amuse but not overpower. And don't forget that stenciled patterns—or even free-hand murals — wisely placed, can give both you and His Majesty the pleasant lift you need.

Be Sunny In the Rain

Associated Press Feature

How are your bad weather manners?

Some people's leave a lot to be desired.

They wear a scowl as black as the clouds and speak grumpily to everyone they meet.

They step heavily into pools at the curb, splashing muddy water on women's stockings.

They are careless with wet umbrellas, leaning them against somebody's coat on the subway, or letting them drip on the hall rug.

They track into the house with muddy rubbers and drop them anywhere for someone else to pick up.

They complain bitterly and persistently about the weather as though they considered it a personal affront.

In elevators and other crowded places they flap around so much that everyone around them gets an extra share of rain.

They make themselves so thoroughly disagreeable that they are a greater affliction than the weather itself.

Mary Haworth's Mail

appears every day except Saturday in the women's pages. Tomorrow, in Section IV, Miss Haworth is taken sharply to task by a woman for indicating that womankind in the post-war world will play a larger part in the domain of public affairs.

Old Newspaper

A newspaper on the drainboard of the kitchen sink can collect vegetable parings, be left there until the refuse from the plates have been added and then make a neat paper package to go into the incinerator or garbage can. This saves extra time spent in cleaning both sink and garbage container as well as making one swift movement of the garbage disposal.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

One of my correspondents feels that too often the advice of a childless woman is spurned. She makes out a very good case for those individuals who, though "abstract" parents, have, through observation and reasoning, reached some valuable conclusions about child rearing.

Miss F. H. writes, "The majority of women with children started comparatively young to rear a family, without having had the benefit of very many years of living to balance their thinking. They don't know themselves, let alone knowing how to deal with the problems of a husband and family.

"Understanding comes with years, though many an old person fails because she has never been observant during her life.

"The young mother, taken up with the physical care of her baby and emotionally tied to it, has little time or inclination to observe other children. True, she may listen to a friend tell of some episodes in her family, but her interest is superficial. Her chief interest is Junior.

"As more children come along and family life becomes more complex, she is more and more muddled, each child being a different problem.

"The childless woman who has carefully observed children, perhaps many hundreds of them in classroom or Sunday school, is able to see what the mother may overlook. There are many problems she could not pretend to solve, but her observations should not be discounted entirely because she has no child.

"I have heard many a woman say, 'Just wait until she has children of her own,' as an excuse for not listening to suggestions or as an excuse for her own failures.

"If all mothers, by virtue of their being mothers, knew the proper way to rear children, the world would not be in its present condition."

Motherhood alone does not bring information and knowledge though it should bring an abounding interest in children. Some of our best authorities on family relationships, from John Locke to the present day, have been individuals whose interest was general not personal.

The mother of 10 children may be making the same mistakes with her tenth she made with her first, having managed to live blindly in the midst of a wealth of experimental evidence.

No blanket statement about mothers of childless women could do justice to either.

TIMELY PERSONALITIES

Wife of OPA Administrator Prefers Simple Life; Has It, Even in Wartime Washington

Maintains Quiet Home for a Very Busy Husband

By Martha Rhyne

For more than 10 years in Washington as Representative and Senator from his native State, Michigan, Prentiss M. Brown, now occupying the precarious position of price administrator of the OPA, has proudly boasted that he is a "family man." There are eight reasons—his charming wife, Marion Walker Brown, and their seven children.

A candidate for the position of the most unperturbed housewife in the Nation is Mrs. Brown, wife of a man whose every decision affects in one way or the other every American housewife. A chat with her is as causal and all-embracing as a morning's visit over the back fence with your next-door neighbor. From the moment this statuesque, gray-haired woman greets you at the door of her apartment in northwest Washington until you reluctantly leave her company you are as much at home and at ease as you would be at her home in St. Ignace, Mich., a town with a population of 2800.

Harris & Ewing

MRS. PRENTISS BROWN

Only Two Children In Washington

You will probably find her writing to one of the children, of whom she is visibly proud and about whom she fondly talks. There is Mariana, wife of Hugh Rudolph, who has a war job with the Chrysler Corporation in Chicago. Ruth, wife of Ensign Forest Evashevski, University of Michigan football hero and contemporary of Tommy Harmon, is in Iowa City, Iowa, where Ensign Evashevski instructs in the physical education division of the Navy's preflight school. James, a junior at the University of Michigan, is enlisted in the Naval Reserve, though he'd rather be an apprentice seaman than an officer. Patricia is a freshman at Michigan State and Prentiss, jr., is a senior at St. Ignace High School. With Mr. and Mrs. Brown here are Barbara, who just completed her sophomore year at the University of Michigan, and Paul. This 8-year-old baby of the family, who attends Chevy Chase Country Day School, leaves his books at the desk of the apartment house and has the girl in charge report his arrival to his mother, so that he can get on to an all-important game of baseball in progress in the neighborhood.

Mrs. Brown's concern is making a quiet home for her husband, whose harassing problems are a matter of public knowledge, and for her children. Tall, slender and impressive, Mrs. Brown is the type who wears slacks or an evening dress with equal grace, but prefers a life without entertaining or being entertained at social gatherings. With nostalgia, she speaks of her home in St. Ignace, where she spent six months of the year during Mr. Brown's participation in peacetime Congresses. But the war has changed all that and possibly for the duration she will try to have her children here with her and leave the home and summer cottage on the lake until happier days.

Uses Canned Goods Sparingly

Simplicity is the keynote of her life. Wearing a tailored blue wool skirt, a white shirtwaist edged in red, and brown low-heeled pumps, she did not bemoan the rationing of canned goods, shoes, gasoline, sugar and coffee. The only driving that is done by the family is done by Mr. Brown, who, wit his secretary, alternates driving to work by weeks, riding one week in his car, the next in the car of his secretary, Mr. Shaw. Canned goods Mrs. Brown has never used to a great extent except during summers at the cottage. Because of the difficulty of getting home-canned goods to Washington from her Michigan home, she will not attempt much of that this year. Two or three meatless days a week won't affect her household because, with milk and eggs plentiful, she finds sufficient substitutes. The shortage of domestic servants is not one of Mrs. Brown's worries as she does her own work and finds ample time to shop, work two days a week at rolling bandages for the Red Cross, and attend the problems of a hard-working husband and an energetic 8-year-old son.

She enthusiastically admires and talks of the amazing bravery of American families with men overseas—thinks that, faced by the bitter experience of the British civilian population, our people would stand up as well—professes a pride in the British stand—deplores "fashionable" unfounded criticism of the British—adores seeing a WAVE in uniform and the other uniformed women—finds no inconvenience in shopping for meats and vegetables in the neighborhood stores and thinks the average housewife who has time to shop can find nourishing, delectable foods if she accepts shortages with reason and a sense of humor—feels for the woman who works and finds the shelves of the store empty at the end of the day when she goes to shop. Mrs. Brown bought her last pair of shoes, oxfords for the great amount of walking she does, in the fall—knew the "secret" of shoe rationing only a few hours before the rest of the Nation and then only because she and Mr. Brown were passing a downtown shoe store late in the afternoon—never buys more than three pairs of shoes a year anyway, with the exception of play shoes—has worked her own garden and scraped snow from the sidewalks and loved it, and looks forward to the good effects of Nation-wide victory gardening. She has great faith in the American people and believes them ready and willing to make necessary sacrifices—and frankly deems all rationing programs yet imposed of little or no inconvenience when accepted with a tempering of logic.

Somehow, observing and admiring the calm and dignity of this woman who is the wife of one of the most important men on the civilian front, one realizes why men, on either the civilian or the fighting front, cherish and defend our country. For behind American men are American women, of which Mrs. Prentiss Brown is truly typical.

15-30 Concert Committees Reorganized

Cupid and Mars have not been making life easy lately for Miss Patricia Morris, chairman of the "15-30" Concert Series. She has been having a general reshuffle in her line-up of committee coworkers and subchairmen.

Miss Peggy Tuckerman has been forced to resign as active head of the ticket committee, owing to her forthcoming marriage. Miss Cristina Michels, vivaciously attractive daughter of the Chilean Ambassador, has taken Miss Tuckerman's place and has appointed as her special committee Miss Teresa Labarthe, daughter of the Peruvian Naval Attache; Senora Martinez Castro, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador; Miss Jane Culbertson, Miss Mary Jane Kirby, Miss Marcia O'Brien, Mrs. James Cochran and Miss Lydia Langer.

Mrs. Norman Keith, another committee worker, has felt the effects of Mars. She recently handed in her resignation as chairman of the program committee, in order to follow her ensign husband wherever the Navy may choose to send him. Her place has been taken by Mrs. Henry Coxe Stokes, the former Miss Isabel Paul of Philadelphia, who is an expert on youth concerts, having attended the whole series in her own home town. Mrs. Gardiner Abbott, jr., and Mrs. Thad Brown, jr., are other service wives who have left the committee to visit their warrior husbands "somewhere in the U. S."

But Miss Morris has been heard to comment on the fact that the young people of Washington, despite all their many wartime duties and obligations, feel that the importance of music in wartime is so great that they will devote their limited spare time to giving the younger public an opportunity of enjoying it. And the young public certainly has enjoyed the Youth Concerts, as overflowing attendance in Constitution Hall at the first two concerts has shown. So the efforts of the committee have not been in vain, and they look forward with enthusiasm to planning for further "15-30" concerts next year.

The last concert in this season's series will be given on Saturday evening, March 13, at 8:30 o'clock in Constitution Hall. Miss Margaret Speaks, celebrated singer of concert and radio, will appear as guest soloist with Dr. Hans Kindler and the National Symphony Orchestra. Tickets for this concert are now on sale at Kitt's Music Store, 1330 G Street, at prices to fit the pocketbooks of all "15 to 30-ers."

Guatemalan Author Is Definite 'North of Border' Enthusiast

FLAVIO HERRERA

Hopes to Learn Americanese on Visit Here

"It is a dream come true."

Flavio Herrera, the Guatemalan professor and author who is in Washington this month at the invitation of the State Department, could not be more thrilled at his chance to visit this country.

He will tell you this in halting phrases, sprinkled liberally with Spanish sentences. His English is limited; but it won't be, long. Before he completes a three-month tour of colleges and universities in the United States, he intends to know not only English, but "Americanese" as well. He is a definite "north of the border" enthusiast.

Loud in Praise Of Democracy

As professor of literature and social science at the University of Guatemala, Senor Herrera has long been a leader in the youth movements and activities of his country . . . a position that was largely responsible for his being asked on his current visit here. Long before the present program for closer relations between the two Americas got under way, Professor Herrera was incorporating the theory of Pan American Unionism into his teachings and writings.

His belief in the principals of American democracy dates back to his own collegiate days, when he first read the works of Emerson and Paine and the speeches and teachings of Lincoln and Jefferson.

Alarmed at the infiltration of German capital into his country in the 30's, Senor Herrera chose this condition for the subject of a book "The Tempest," written in 1937. The publication, popular in his native Guatemela for several years, is currently being translated into English.

Has Written Ten Books

He has long preached the theory that union of peoples, in addition to union of governments, can be achieved between the two continents; that the understanding between the two should transcend politics and administration.

The author of 10 novels and books of poems, Senor Herrera has traveled extensively in Europe and his own country. On his first trip here he will speak to groups at several universities, including Georgetown, Columbia, Pennsylvania, Texas and California. How long will be remain in the country? "As long as possible . . . perhaps six months, if the State Department is kind."

Chilean Envoy, Wife Sponsor Concert of Music Guild

The Chilean Embassy tomorrow evening will provide the setting for a benefit concert for the sustaining fund of the Chamber Music Guild, and the event will be under the auspices of the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Michels.

A number of people will give dinners preceding the affair, among them Mrs. James Clement Dunn and Mrs. Hendrick Eustis.

A large proportion of the diplomatic contingent will be patrons and patronesses for the concert, including the Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the British Ambassador and Lady Halifax, the Cuban Ambassador and Mme. Concheso; the Ambassador of Poland and Mme. Ciechanowska, Madame Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslavian Ambassador; the Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wei, the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi, the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia and Mme. Hurban, the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de DeBayle, the Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope, the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceres, the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Troncoso, the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais, the Minister of Iceland and Mme. Thors and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller.

Charlotte Morris To Be Bride Of Lieut. Whyte

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Morris of New York City and Washington announce the engagement of their daughter, Charlotte Elizabeth, to Lieut. (j. g.) Joseph L. Whyte, U. S. N. R., son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Whyte of Malverene, Long Island, N. Y.

Miss Morris—"Bunny" to her friends—is a graduate of Fairmont Junior College, Washington, and attended the Conservatory of Musical Arts, New York City.

Lieutenant Whyte is a graduate of Brooklyn Preparatory School and New York University and attended St. John's Law School until called to active duty. He is a member of Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity and formerly was employed by the Bank of New York.

The wedding will take place in May.

Miss Huntington On Way to Brazil For Wartime Job

Now en route to Brazil is Miss Joanna Huntington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, who is under appointment by the State Department to serve at the United States Embassy in Rio de Janeiro. Miss Huntington is to be assistant to the cultural relations officer at the embassy.

Following her graduation from Smith College last June Miss Huntington attended the Portuguese Institute, which was set up by the American Council of Learned Societies at the University of Vermont. Before her departure for Brazil she had been connected with the Brazilian Military Commission here.

Post Profile — Thomas Campbell Clark

Probable Successor To Thurman Arnold Is Practical Lawyer

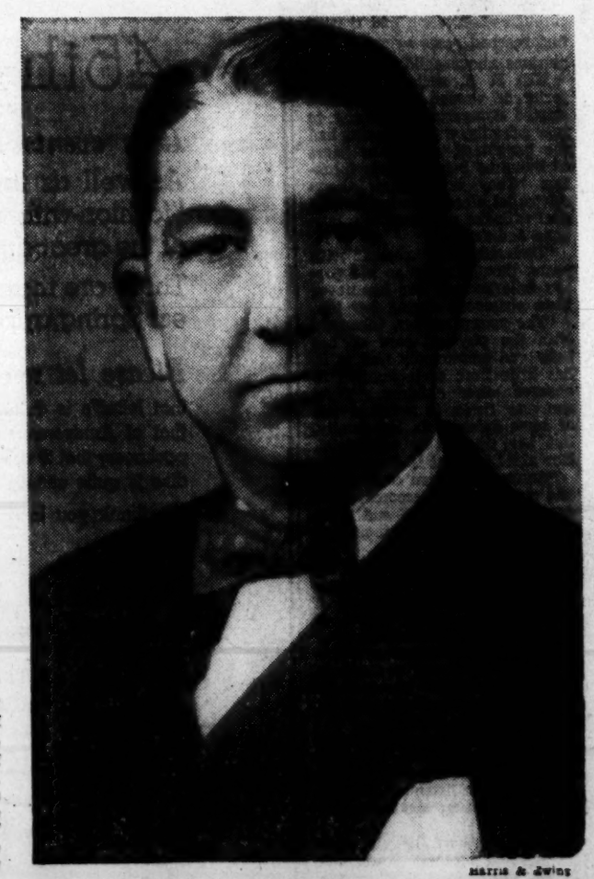
It begins to look as though a successor has been named to Thurman Arnold, and a very able one, at that. The name of Tom Clark, tall, genial Texan, has been sent to the President. If the nomination is approved, Clark will be Assistant Attorney General and Chief of the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice.

As a trust-buster Mr. Clark has already had much practice. For the last year or so, as Chief of the War Frauds Unit, he has been busy indicting all war profiteers, from the lofty Anaconda Copper Co. down to your local fruit vendor.

Before that, he had the difficult task of transplanting the Japanese from the West Coast inland. While he was living in the West as head of the Antitrust Division in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle, Clark was asked by the Attorney General to help solve the problem of the destiny and destination of the thousands of Japanese on the Coast, 75 per cent of whom were American citizens. During those first few weeks there were many headaches. "We were working night and day," said Mr. Clark. "We'd get one call after another. One would say 'Don't you dare move the Japanese; they are American citizens.' The next one would say 'Move the Japs out of this area or we'll kill 'em.' All in all, it was right difficult," he drawled.

Moving Japs Proves Problem

The President turned the problem over to the War Department and, accordingly, General De Witt asked Mr. Clark to serve on his staff. The first problem was that of selling the idea of moving the Japanese to States that were to inherit them. Many Governors feared labor problems would ensue and were equally afraid that if the moving were done in an indiscriminate manner the Japanese might become desperate.



Harris & Ewing

THOMAS CAMPBELL CLARK

"Finally the Japs were frozen by the Army, ordered to remain where they were," explained Mr. Clark, as he observed my baffled but pleased expression at the thought of freezing thousands of Japs so easily." "Control Centers were established and the census people arrived to make a systematic record," he said. The rest of the story is no doubt a familiar one; trains, trucks and buses transported the Japanese to temporary process stations; later to Relocation Centers, where they came under the War Relocation Authority. Asked if the Japanese had made trouble on the West Coast, and if he thought it necessary to move them, Mr. Clark seemed to feel that it was the expedient thing to do. "It is fairly safe to assume that there will be no invasion of the West Coast and it was the proper measure to take to insure against attempted signaling and sabotage," he added.

Tom Clark is a hard-hitting, practical court lawyer from Dallas, Tex. His chief interest is the practical prosecution of the law. In private practice in the Lone Star State, and since he has been in Government service, he has been doing almost continuous court work, starting out as Special Assistant to the Attorney General, going from there to the job as Chief of the Wage and Hour Unit of the Justice Department, and lastly as head of the War Frauds Unit.

Hails From Texas, Has Been in Charge Of War Frauds Unit

'What New Job?' He Inquires

Asked if in his new job he wouldn't miss the fireworks of the War Frauds Unit, Clark was pleasantly evasive, "What new job? I don't know what anyone is talking about. Like Will Rogers, all I know is what I read in the papers. They tell me that I am to head up the Antitrust Division. If so, the personnel will remain the same as in War Frauds, and we would have plenty to do. There are 50 cases on the books to be tried. In the past I have always been able to foment enough trouble, and I reckon that I can stir plenty up in the future," observed the pleasant Mr. Clark, who is far from warlike in appearance, with kind brown eyes and a quiet, easy manner. I had the definite feeling from talking to him that despite his new job he has not and will not lose his interest in War Frauds. The two work almost interchangeably, for cases of war fraud have arisen out of violation of antitrust laws. Operating with 10 temporary offices throughout the country, the Antitrust Division is able to cope with the various types of cases which may arise.

Chief concern of activist Clark will be to enforce the antitrust laws against capital and labor alike, bringing about a system of free enterprise.

Well Known Singer and Diseuse Turns Talent to Community Aid

Ensign Small of WAVES Wed To Ensign Marshall, U. S. N. R.

Ceremony Takes Place in Church; Bride Resigns Her Commission in Navy

And—so they were married. But not without special dispensations, a resignation, trials and tribulations.

The bride is Ensign Gwendolyn D. Small of the WAVES. The bridegroom is Preston Fairfax Marshall, ensign in the U. S. N. R. Their wedding took place last Saturday in All Saints Church, Chevy Chase, Md., with only four days advance notice, and the bride's gown was delivered to the church two hours before the ceremony.

Navy regulations require the resignation of a WAVE officer if she marries a naval officer. And WAVE regulations do not permit one of their members to wear anything but her uniform even at her own wedding.

This bride sent in her resignation, only to be informed at her wedding reception of a directive just sent through rescinding the marriage order. She wore the traditional white satin through special dispensation.

Comdr. John D. Small, U. S. N., gave his daughter in marriage. The Rev. Charles Lowry of the Episcopal Theological Seminary officiated at the ceremony held at 5:30 o'clock and followed by a reception in the East Room of the Mayflower. Ivory satin fashioned the bride's gown which had a long torso bodice, a sweetheart neckline, long close sleeves and a full skirt. A Russian headdress of seed pearls held her tulle veil and she carried a shower bouquet of white orchids, roses and lilacs.

The maid of honor was Miss Joan Davis Small, sister of the bride, who wore a pastel blue chiffon gown made with a basque and small veiled pompon hat of matching shade. She carried a bouquet of spring flowers.

Other attendants were Miss Mary Macalister of Duke University, Miss Doris Kenyon of Washington, and little Storm Small, who was the flower girl. Miss Macalister was in pastel pink chiffon with veiled hat of matching pink and Miss Kenyon wore pastel yellow chiffon with an orchid hat. Both carried varicolored spring flowers.

Capt. Raymond Laubenstein, U. S. A., served as best man and the ushers were Lieut. Charles Horner, U. S. N. R.; Capt. Fred Lawson, U. S. A.; Lieut. Kenneth Downey, U. S. N. R.; Ensign Robert J. McNamara, U. S. N. R.

Mrs. Small, the bride's mother, had chosen for her gown a gray crepe trimmed with lace and worn with a flowered hat. Mrs. Preston Marshall the mother of the bridegroom, was in aqua crepe with sequins and a flowered hat.

Ensign Marshall and his bride left after the reception for New York on their wedding trip. They are back now and the bride is waiting for official recognition of her status—whether she is to be Mrs. Marshall or Ensign Marshall.

The bride attended the Downer School on Milwaukee, the University of Illinois and the University of Maryland. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. Ensign Marshall, who is the son of Comdr. Preston Marshall, U. S. N., and Mrs. Marshall, attended Lehigh University. He is a member of Sigmu Nu fraternity.

Mrs. Grace to Sing for Red Cross

She's putting her talent to work for good causes.

Mrs. John Grace, jr., attractive wife of Lieutenant Commander Grace, is taking her costumes out of trunks and polishing up the repertoire that made her famous as Frances Coates Grace, soprano and diseuse. She will make several appearances for the Red Cross this month while keeping up her work at the Naval Center and the Stage Door Canteen.

Mrs. Grace is one of the outstanding interpreters of solo opera, condensing the works and interpreting them in her own way.

Two years ago Mrs. Coates went on a concert tour of the country for the British War Relief Societies presenting a dramatic reading of "The White Cliffs" to a musical setting written for her by the Czech composer, Paul Sifler. This tour she undertook "as a means through which I could repay in part the British for their hospitality and kindness to me when I was singing in London in 1934."

For some years she has been deftly cutting operas to a one-hour length and her repertoire includes "Peter Ibbetsen," "Caponsacchi," and "Le Jongleur of Notre Dame." Now, with her husband in Navy uniform, she has come down from her home in Chicago to be a "duration resident" of the Capital. Her daughter, Katherine, who is attending Vassar, made an informal bow to society here during her Christmas holidays.

"I like to do things by living American composers," says this petite dark-haired singer. "For their ideas are alive and their newness is challenging."

A Gray Lady, Mrs. Grace's first appearance for the Red Cross took place Thursday at the Twentieth Century Club. Accompanied by Mrs. K. C. McGregor, wife of Colonel McGregor, U. S. A. A. F., she gave "Narrative in Red and White."

Need for More Chaplains in Service Noted

The urgent need of more chaplains for our armed forces was emphasized at two meetings here yesterday.

In the morning, leaders of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, representing 29 Protestant denominations, conferred with Brig. Gen. William R. Arnold, Army Chief of Chaplains. And at noon, Chaplain John B. Carruthers pleaded for more chaplains at fellowship luncheon in the Senate dining room.

Chaplain Carruthers, now serving as liaison official between the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church and men in the service, in his address called for a "survey of the procedures that would improve the rate of commissioning chaplains."

He added that he would carry his suggestion for the survey to the House and Senate Military Affairs Committees.

The General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, at its meeting with Chaplain Arnold, stressed both the need of more chaplains and the pending bill before Congress to establish a separate Navy Chaplaincy Bureau—a much-discussed issue at present. The names of Protestant chaplains who have given their lives for the cause of democracy were read.

Among those attending the sessions with Chaplain Arnold were Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, Washington Methodist resident prelate and commission chairman; Dr. S. Arthur Devan, commission director; Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches.

Bible Class Tea to Honor Two Teachers

Miss Esther Lomb and Mrs. M. D. Elmore, present and first teachers, respectively, of the Crusader Bible Class of National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, will be honored tomorrow afternoon at a tea at the home of Miss Kathryn Parr, 1830 R Street Northwest. The class is celebrating its twenty-sixth anniversary this year.

MISS LOMB

Miss Lomb is a leader in religious education, having pioneered in this field in Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio. She is the author of several text-books used in week-day religious instruction. Today she is supervisor of week-day church schools for the State of Maryland under the auspices of the Council of Churches.

Mrs. Elmore organized the class in 1917 during World War I with only two members. It grew rapidly and took in members largely from the business and professional women of the Government. Today the membership totals 75 women. Then as now the group participated in Red Cross and other wartime activities. Five active members have been in the class since 1920 and one, Miss Elsie Green, since 1917.

United Brethren Plan Wednesday Service

The second in a series of Lenten services will be held Wednesday at 8 p. m. at Memorial United Brethren Church, North Capitol Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, of which the Rev. Ira Sankey Ernst is pastor. The general theme is "Personalities of the Passion"; this Wednesday's subject will be "Thomas, the Doubter."

Lenten Mission Planned

The Vincentian Fathers will conduct a Lenten mission at St. Matthew's Cathedral, beginning tomorrow at 8 p. m., with the first week's services for women, and the following week's for men. Catholics and non-Catholics are invited.

Coronation Of Pope Pius Celebrated

With the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, and the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, presiding, a solemn high mass was sung in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, at Catholic University, yesterday in commemoration of the fourth anniversary of the coronation of Pope Pius XII.

Members of the Diplomatic Corps and official Washington participated with members of the university's teaching staff and their families, the student body and members of the religious communities affiliated with the university. The mass was preceded by a procession of faculties, clerics and religious from the vestibule into the shrine. All morning classes of the university were suspended to permit the student body to attend.

The Right Rev. Msgrs. Edward B. Jordan, Francesco Lardone and George Johnson served as assistants to the apostolic delegate, while the Right Rev. Msgrs. Francis J. Haas and Donald A. MacLean assisted Archibishop Curley. The mass was solemnized by the Right Rev. Msgrs. Patrick J. McCormick, acting rector of the university. The sermon was preached by the Most Rev. Peter Ireton, Coadjutor Bishop of Richmond. The master of ceremonies was the Rev. Dr. William J. Lallou, assisted by the Rev. Walter Schmitz, S. S.

Christian Church Evangelistic Rites

For the next seven weeks, including Easter Sunday, the Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D Streets, Northeast, will engage in an evangelistic campaign at the regular Sunday services designed to win converts. This series of sermons under the general theme "Opening Doors for God" will deal with fundamental faith. As his opening sermon in this series this Sunday morning, the minister, Carroll C. Roberts, will speak on "Opening Doors for the Word."

The Rev. Roberts' theme at the hour of evening worship, 7:45 o'clock, will be "An Open Door in Heaven."

Kirsh Guild Speaker

The Rev. Felix M. Kirsh, O. M. Cap., will address the Catholic Educator's Guild tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. in Carroll Hall, 924 G Street, Northwest.

Father Kirsh's topic will be "Major Problems in Religious Education Today." All Catholic lay teachers are cordially invited to join the Educator's Guild.

Dean Pardue To Speak at Epiphany

The Very Rev. Austin B. Pardue, D. D., dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo, New York, will address Lenten noonday services Monday through Friday at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street, Northwest.

Dean Pardue is noted for his radio broadcasts, being the conductor of the "Our Morals" program on the Mutual Broadcasting national network is considered by many to be one of the finest of the younger preachers in America today. He was born in Chicago, Ill., and educated at Hobart College and at the General Theological Seminary. Before going ot Buffalo he was rector of Gethsemane Church, Minneapolis, which he built into one of the strongest downtown parishes in the Episcopal Church. For the past four years he has been in Buffalo where large congregations hear him every Sunday.

Scribner's have published two books of sermons of Dean Pardue, "Bold to Say" and "Our Morals," which have an extraordinary sale for religious works. He has been a deputy to several General Conventions of the Episcopal Church and has been a special University preacher at many of the most important universities in this country. He has received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from Hobart College and the University of Buffalo.

"LOVE DIVINE, ALL LOVES EXCELLING"
• • • CHARLES WESLEY • • •

Love divine, all loves excelling,
Joy of heav'n to earth come down!
Fix in us Thy humble dwelling;
All Thy faithful mercies crown.
Jesus, Thou art all compassion,
Pure, unbounded love Thou art;
Visit us with Thy salvation;
Enter ev'ry trembling heart.

Few of the earlier hymns dwelt upon the thought of God as Love. The popularity of this hymn is probably partly due to the fact that it does address God in this way every line bespeaks the rich, human experience found in the Divine Love. It is truly a sermon in song, preached by one of the world's greatest hymn writers

Need for More Chaplains in Service Noted

The urgent need of more chaplains for our armed forces was emphasized at two meetings here yesterday.

In the morning, leaders of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, representing 29 Protestant denominations, conferred with Brig. Gen. William R. Arnold, Army Chief of Chaplains. And at noon, Chaplain John B. Carruthers pleaded for more chaplains at fellowship luncheon in the Senate dining room.

Chaplain Carruthers, now serving as liaison official between the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church and men in the service, in his address called for a "survey of the procedures that would improve the rate of commissioning chaplains."

He added that he would carry his suggestion for the survey to the House and Senate Military Affairs Committees.

The General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, at its meeting with Chaplain Arnold, stressed both the need of more chaplains and the pending bill before Congress to establish a separate Navy Chaplaincy Bureau—a much-discussed issue at present. The names of Protestant chaplains who have given their lives for the cause of democracy were read.

Among those attending the sessions with Chaplain Arnold were Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, Washington Methodist resident prelate and commission chairman; Dr. S. Arthur Devan, commission director; Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches.

Bible Class Tea to Honor Two Teachers

Miss Esther Lomb and Mrs. M. D. Elmore, present and first teachers, respectively, of the Crusader Bible Class of National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, will be honored tomorrow afternoon at a tea at the home of Miss Kathryn Parr, 1830 R Street Northwest. The class is celebrating its twenty-sixth anniversary this year.

MISS LOMB

Miss Lomb is a leader in religious education, having pioneered in this field in Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio. She is the author of several text-books used in week-day religious instruction. Today she is supervisor of week-day church schools for the State of Maryland under the auspices of the Council of Churches.

Mrs. Elmore organized the class in 1917 during World War I with only two members. It grew rapidly and took in members largely from the business and professional women of the Government. Today the membership totals 75 women. Then as now the group participated in Red Cross and other wartime activities. Five active members have been in the class since 1920 and one, Miss Elsie Green, since 1917.

United Brethren Plan Wednesday Service

The second in a series of Lenten services will be held Wednesday at 8 p. m. at Memorial United Brethren Church, North Capitol Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, of which the Rev. Ira Sankey Ernst is pastor. The general theme is "Personalities of the Passion"; this Wednesday's subject will be "Thomas, the Doubter."

The Vincentian Fathers will conduct a Lenten mission at St. Matthew's Cathedral, beginning tomorrow at 8 p. m., with the first week's services for women, and the following week's for men. Catholics and non-Catholics are invited.

Coronation Of Pope Pius Celebrated

With the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, and the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, presiding, a solemn high mass was sung in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, at Catholic University, yesterday in commemoration of the fourth anniversary of the coronation of Pope Pius XII.

Members of the Diplomatic Corps and official Washington participated with members of the university's teaching staff and their families, the student body and members of the religious communities affiliated with the university. The mass was preceded by a procession of faculties, clerics and religious from the vestibule into the shrine. All morning classes of the university were suspended to permit the student body to attend.

The Right Rev. Msgrs. Edward B. Jordan, Francesco Lardone and George Johnson served as assistants to the apostolic delegate, while the Right Rev. Msgrs. Francis J. Haas and Donald A. MacLean assisted Archibishop Curley. The mass was solemnized by the Right Rev. Msgrs. Patrick J. McCormick, acting rector of the university. The sermon was preached by the Most Rev. Peter Ireton, Coadjutor Bishop of Richmond. The master of ceremonies was the Rev. Dr. Willam J. Lallou, assisted by the Rev. Walter Schmitz, S. S.

Christian Church Evangelistic Rites

For the next seven weeks, including Easter Sunday, the Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D Streets, Northeast, will engage in an evangelistic campaign at the regular Sunday services designed to win converts. This series of sermons under the general theme "Opening Doors for God" will deal with fundamental faith. As his opening sermon in this series this Sunday morning, the minister, Carroll C. Roberts, will speak on "Opening Doors for the Word."

The Rev. Roberts' theme at the hour of evening worship, 7:45 o'clock, will be "An Open Door in Heaven."

Kirsh Guild Speaker

The Rev. Felix M. Kirsh, O. M. Cap., will address the Catholic Educator's Guild tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. in Carroll Hall, 924 G Street, Northwest.

Father Kirsh's topic will be "Major Problems in Religious Education Today." All Catholic lay teachers are cordially invited to join the Educator's Guild.

The Very Rev. Austin B. Pardue, D. D., dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo, New York, will address Lenten noonday services Monday through Friday at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street, Northwest.

Dean Pardue is noted for his radio broadcasts, being the conductor of the "Our Morals" program on the Mutual Broadcasting national network is considered by many to be one of the finest of the younger preachers in America today. He was born in Chicago, Ill., and educated at Hobart College and at the General Theological Seminary. Before going ot Buffalo he was rector of Gethsemane Church, Minneapolis, which he built into one of the strongest downtown parishes in the Episcopal Church. For the past four years he has been in Buffalo where large congregations hear him every Sunday.

Scribner's have published two books of sermons of Dean Pardue, "Bold to Say" and "Our Morals," which have an extraordinary sale for religious works. He has been a deputy to several General Conventions of the Episcopal Church and has been a special University preacher at many of the most important universities in this country. He has received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from Hobart College and the University of Buffalo.

Chaplain to Speak At Covenant Church

Chaplain John B. Carruthers will speak tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, Eighteenth and N Streets, Northwest, on "John Witherspoon, Minister of the Gospel and Soldier of the Revolution." Chaplain Carruthers has been released for a short time from his duties as chaplain in the Army Air Corps to aid the local church's work among soldiers.

Special Service

Minister To Ordain His Son

Dr. Harry L. Ball, pastor of Columbia Heights Christian (Disciples of Christ) Church, tomorrow at 11 a. m. will ordain his son, Winston C. Bell, to the Christian ministry in services at the local church. Dr. Raymond F. McLain, president of Transylvania College, Lexington, Ky., will be guest preacher.

BELL

Also assisting in the service will be the Rev. J. Lloyd Black, secretary of the Capital area Christian churches, and Arthur C. Ridgeway, Byron Hunter, Dr. George T. Warren and Roy Harlow, elders.

Dr. and Mrs. Bell have given another son to the ministry—Wayne, who was ordained three years ago in Marion, Ohio. Another son, Keith, was studying for the ministry at Transylvania College when called into the service of his country. Another son, Raymond, is in the Medical Induction Corps. The Rev. Winston C. Bell will continue graduate studies at the College of the Bible, Lexington, and will preach at the Heidelberg and Bagdad Christian churches in that state.

Rules Released For Bible Story Contest

Rules for the annual city wide Bible story telling contest conducted by the Young Men's Christian Association in co-operation with the District of Columbia Sunday School Association were announced this week by the religious work department of the Y.

"LOVE DIVINE, ALL LOVES EXCELLING"
— — — CHARLES WESLEY — — —

Love divine, all loves excelling,
Joy of heav'n to earth come down!
Fix in us Thy humble dwelling;
All Thy faithful mercies crown.
Jesus, Thou art all compassion,
Pure, unbounded love Thou art;
Visit us with Thy salvation;
Enter ev'ry trembling heart.

Few of the earlier hymns dwelt upon the thought of God as Love. The popularity of this hymn is probably partly due to the fact that it does address God in this way every line bespeaks the rich, human experience found in the Divine Love. It is truly a sermon in song, preached by one of the world's greatest hymn writers.

Grin and Bear It

By Lichty

"I may sound optimistic, but I think the committee will recommend that only half the public's income go for taxes!"

Greek Youth Here to Tell Of Invasion

At Greek War Relief Headquarters, 1218 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, was Pvt. Basil Barberloglou, 19, of the United States Army, brought to Washington from Salt Lake City, Utah, to tell members of the United Nations Club today something of the German-Italian invasion of Greece and his subsequent escape from Crete to Alexandria, and subsequently to New York.

Barberoglou

Pvt. Barberloglou didnt know quite what he was going to say today, but talked about his past, present and future, and a little about his four-day train ride here from his Army Air Force training camp in Salt Lake City.

Once the Nazi paratroop invasion of Crete hit its stride, Basil said, the skies were littered with pieces of paratroopers being blown up by British and Greek ground batteries. "This went on for some time," Basil explained, "until the Germans covered the island and took it over."

His months of fighting with the Greek army ended when the army fell and he fled from Greece to Crete and then by boat to Alexandria. In Port Said, Egypt, he boarded a ship and came to New York.

Basil didn't become visibly upset when speaking of the Italian invaders. He agreed that the Italians were, as their generals have said, poets and not soldiers, therefore not to be blamed for what they did. He said he didn't know whether the Italians or the Nazis had killed his mother and father in Salonica.

Basil glowed when he talked of the United States Army's wonderful food. He recalled days at the fighting fronts early last year when he lived on pieces of dry bread. At this joint he began to speak rhapsodically of his Washington quarters for the next few days—the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club.

The young Greek member of our Army hopes to resume his studies of engineering when the war ends. Already he has a year of college training to his credit at the American International College in Springfield, Mass., where he was living and studying until joining the Army last month.

Nazi Supply Ship Hit

London, March 12 (AP).—A British coastal force scored a torpedo hit on a medium-sized enemy supply ship last night in the strait of Dover, it was announced today. It was the third successive night that British navy patrols had caught and damaged ships.

174 Selects Inducted Into Armed Service

Wisconsin House Votes New Time

Madison, Wis., March 12 (AP).—The Wisconsin Assembly passed a bill today, 67 to 21, to adopt Mountain War Time for the Sttae. Wisconsin now has Central War Time.

The measure was introduced by a group of Republicans who said it was prompted by numerous requests for it from agricultural areas. It now goes to the Senate.

Congressmen Praise And Berate Labor

C. I. O. PRESIDENT PHIL MURRAY heard some kind words spoken about labor unions, and also some caustic ones, at an off-the-record dinner which he gave to 30 members of the House of Representatives last week.

The dinner was held in a private dining room of Washington's new Hotel Statler, where, over chicken (one piece) and mashed potatoes, Murray and other top C. I. O. leaders had a candid talk with the Congressmen about labor's cooperation in the war effort.

"I didn't invite you Congressmen here to ask favors of you," said the C. I. O. boss. "I want you to take down your hair and tell us what you think of the C. I. O. The franker the better."

The legislators took Murray at his word. The get-together lasted from 8 p. m. to 12:30 a. m. and everyone had something to say. Most of the speeches were friendly to labor, but at least two Representatives turned on the vitriol. They were: Charles M. LaFollette, freshman Indiana Republican (no relation to the Senator from Wisconsin) and George G. Sadowski, Michigan Democrat.

Conservative Blast

Sadowski's blast was along constructive lines. He charged that too many union leaders were playing politics," and that many leaders want to "run for office" the moment they become prominent in labor. He cited the case of a Michigan C. I. O. official who grabbed off a big job for which he was unfitted in an OPA regional rent control office, and whose mistakes he said, were giving labor a black eye in the vicinity.

LaFollette tore into the C. I. O. for backing New Deal Representative Ray McKeough of Illinois against Republican Senator "Curly" Brooks in the last senatorial election. Murray didn't have to reply. The Hoosier's speech was so patently political and prejudicial to McKeough, a highly popular House figure, that several Congressmen walked out on him.

Representatives Warren Magnuson of Washington, Michael Bradley of Pennsylvania, "Mike" Kirwan of Ohio, John Lesinski of Michigan and others, struck some forensic blows for labor's participation in the war effort after listening to a frank talk by Murray, who defended labor against charges of "absenteeism."

"I want you gentlemen to know that C. I. O. unions are giving their all in this struggle," Murray declared. "Whatever absenteeism we are guilty of is involuntary, due to illness, lack of transportation or other unavoidable causes. I've sent down personal orders to the leaders of every C. I. O. union in the country to stop absenteeism. We're also doing all in our power to prevent strikes. The record shows that."

Republican Representative George H. Bender of Ohio, a frequent critic of New Deal labor policies, almost caused the other guests to fall out of their chairs by loudly applauding Murray's speech and declaring that "every member of Congress should have been here to listen to it."

WPB Economies

IN THE cocktail lounges and Pullman cars, a story is going around that a Japanese spy reported to the Emperor it would be useless to bomb Washington, because if one building were destroyed, two or three others would remain, all of which are doing the same work.

That tale is much more than a funny story to WPB's Executive Vice Chairman, Charles E. Wilson, because he has found a lot of WPB outfits doing the same work. So he has ordered a drastic streamlining of that top-heavy organization.

Wilson has sent a memo to WPB executives saying "Good management demands we make the most effective use of our present personnel and conduct our operations with maximum economy."

Then he listed these economies: (1) "Suspension of all recruitment" for new jobs and all new appointments except by his specific approval. WPB already has 21,500 employes, plus 2400 on requisition. Yet the Budget Bureau has given it a job ceiling of 22,000.

(2) Immediate reduction in travel, which Wilson says represents a substantial part of the total WPB budget.

(3) Close control over long-distance telephone calls, printing and binding. It is a fond habit of WPB executives to pick up the phone every time they want to say something to Detroit or Los Angeles.

To help with this economy Wilson has drafted Bernard L. Gladieux from the Budget Bureau.

Note: With Wilson coming into more power than the ousted Ferd Eberstadt ever had, Donald Nelson is about to take a long vacation. Incidentally, Eberstadt's application for an Army commission has been rejected.

North African Bombing

MILITARY experts in Washington are now forecasting privately that Rommel's Africa Corps will receive the coup de grace not from ground forces in Tunisia but from American Flying Fortresses. Their targets will be Axis shipping.

Already Axis supply lines from Sicily to Tunisia are losing 1 ship out of every 3, with the daylight precision bombing of American planes doing most of the damage. Soon the drying ground will permit operation from fields closer to this line of supply.

Right on the Nose

Two instances of precision bombing have won admiration here. One was a strike on an Axis ammunition ship in the harbor of Tripoli before Rommel evacuated. From an altitude of 23,400 feet, a bomb struck the ship squarely, blew it to pieces, and even destroyed the dock and two lighters alongside.

Another instance was an attack on Bizerte, in northern Tunisia, in which a U. S. plane landed a bomb on a tiny tongue of land on which were important Axis installations.

Rommel fears air attack, and it was this fear which in part prompted his recent drive against American forces in the Kasserine area. He was able to take three landing fields we had been using, and before withdrawing he plowed them up. Now they have been retaken and are being reconditioned.

The time will some when United States planes will fill the air over the Tunisian coast and prevent delivery of any supplies. That should be the end of the Germans in North Africa.

Army to Reduce Its 'Gas' Consumption

Atlanta, Ga. (INS).—The Army will make drastic cuts in the consumption of gasoline in the Southeast, according to instructions issued by the Quartermaster Branch, Fourth Service Command. In some cases the reduction will amount to 50 per cent of the average daily consumption a year ago.

Dizzying Days Lie Ahead For Capital's Stellar Guest

Elaborate Program Planned for Ruth Hussey; Washington Filmdom Supports Red Cross; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IT SEEMS no more than fair to warn Ruth Hussey that when she arrives in Washington next Wednesday morning, preliminary to the premiere of "Tennessee Johnson" at Loew's Capitol Theater on Thursday, she will be letting herself in for as dizzying a two days of whirlwind activities as any visiting star ever has experienced in the National Capital.

PAULETTE GODDARD

On the day of her arrival, she will be luncheon guest of Tennessee's congressional delegation at 1 p. m. Later in the afternoon, she will receive the drama desks in her suite at the Carlton. That evening she will visit a nearby Army camp.

On Thursday, the Tennessee State Society will sponsor the premiere of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, which tells the dramatic life story of Andrew Johnson, the distinguished Tennessean whose name it bears. Before the 9 p. m. performance at the Capitol, Miss Hussey, Governor Cooper of Tennessee and descendants of President Johnson will be guests at a reception in the Congressional Room at the Willard Hotel.

Between these planned engagements, Miss Hussey no doubt will find ample occupation salvaging herself from the friendly attentions of the autograph hunters.

Since the implication already has been given, it might be well to add that also arriving on Wednesday will be Governor Prentiss Cooper of Tennessee and two lineal descendants of the former President whose life is celebrated in the film. These are Mrs. Martha B. Patterson and her daughter, of Greenville, Tenn., where Andrew Johnson began the career that led him to the White House as Chief Executive upon the death of Lincoln. As has been repeatedly said here, Van Heflin's performance in the title role of "Tennessee Johnson" is of a caliber that should launch him on a new career, leading to Academy Awards as an individual star, instead of "best supporting player." It should be of enormous interest to Mrs. Patterson and her daughter.

Filmdom Rallies to Red Cross

General Zone Manager John J. Payette of Warner Brothers, chairman of the motion picture unit of the public relations committee of the Red Cross War Fund Drive, headed by C. Melvin Sharpe, has appointed Eastern Division Manager Carter Barron of Loew's, Inc., to act as cochairman, with Frank La Falce, advertising and publicity director for Warners, as assistant chairman. Also on the committee are Samuel N. Wheeler, Twentieth Century-Fox branch manager, and Chief Barker of the Washington Variety Club; A. Julian Brylawski, president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of the District; A. E. Lichtman, president of the Lichtman Theaters, and Nat Browne and Harry E. Lohmeyer, Warner executives in Washington. To those familiar with the structure of "show business" in the Capital, this means that the Red Cross drive now has behind it practically the full strength of the motion-picture industry in the District.

Paramount's all star, Technicolor musical, "Star Spangled Rhythm," has been voted the winner of the February Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award by the National Screen Council, charged with selecting the picture providing the best screen entertainment for the entire family from the general releases each month. Not having seen the Paramount number at the time of the balloting, our vote was cast for "Tennessee Johnson." Until I HAVE seen it, I'll take the word of my fellow members of the council for it—with reservations!

"Star Spangled Rhythm," of course, is the business coming into the Earle Theater on the tail of the "Mary Ann," now occupying the screen in "Air Force." It enlists the services of all the stars, directors, writers and contract players Paramount could sweep up on the home lot. I started to count the official roster of luminaries engaged in the frolic, but only got up to 40 when I ran out of numbers. However, one of the highlights of the charade is reputed to be the terrific ribbing Paulette Goddard, Dorothy Lamour and Veronica Lake give themselves and each other in a tuneful little something called "A Sweater, a Sarong and a Peek-a-boo Bang." The Post's Hedda Hopper began chortling over this one 'way back there months ago when it was being shot on the lot.

Dots and Dashes

Tomorrow at the National, "Priorities of 1942" will be prying open its third consecutive week with two matinees and a night performance . . . Carmen Amaya, fieriest of the flamenco dancers, and Barto and Mann, craziest of the knockabouts, have been tucked into the spots on the bill formerly occupied by Gloria Swanson & Co. . . . Only two more juvenile plays in the series of six the Children's Museum has been sponsoring at the National on Saturday mornings—Clare Tree Major's Children's Theater of New York's "Captive Maid of Old Carlisle," on March 27, and the Children's Theater of Evanston, Ill., production of Hans Christian Anderson's "The Emperor's New Clothes" to wind it up . . . All of the Washington theaters are awaiting March 18 . . . On that date they all get "At the Front," the four-reel Technicolor record of the initial activities in North Africa, photographed in large part by Col. Darryl Zanuck, on leave from Twentieth Century-Fox . . . This is the week Loew's Capitol is collecting old watches—wrist or pocket—in cooperation with the Washington Chapter of Russian War Relief.

Dont's-Ask-Such-Silly-Questions Note

Yes, of course, they will be distributed on tick!

Earle

It's a second week for the sturdy "Mary Ann," that brazen Flying Fortress that has been making aerial history in "Air Forces" at the Earle Theater. The narrative of her flight from San Francisco to Pearl Harbor to Wake Island, Manila and finally Australia, is emblazoned with heroism beyond the call of duty, which has been the keynote of our armed forces in the Pacific.

The story of how a disinterested group of men became a harmonious working crew with a single thought and ideal—to destroy the enemy—is told by such capable actors as Harry Carey, John Garfield, Gig Young, John Ridgely and George Tobias.

Palace

Fatal in its fascination to screen writers, amnesia, that sudden and oft-inexplicable loss of memory, has never met with the same satisfying success as it does in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen version of James Hilton's "Random Harvest."

Currently in its third week at the Palace Theater, it is an excitingly drawn adventure, containing a tale of love that survived through many years of darkness. Ronald Colman and Greer Garson are costarred.

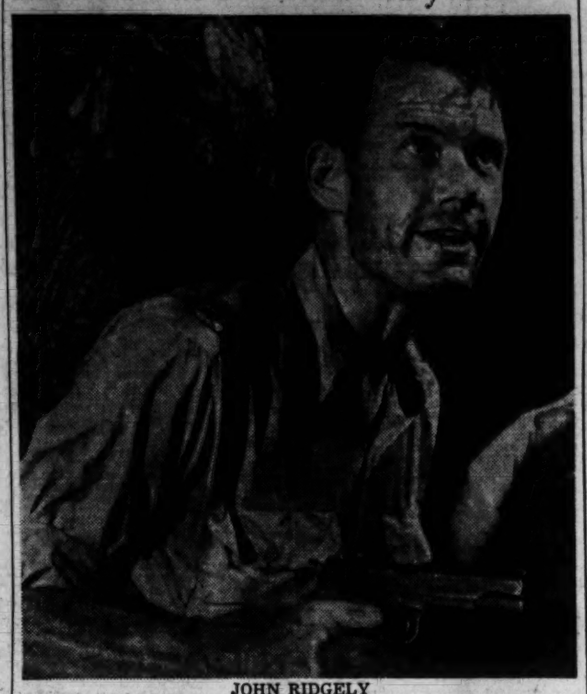
The Pilot Who Loved His 'Mary Ann'



JOHN RIDGELY

the Capt. Michael Quincannon, "Irish" to his pals, in command of the B-17 Flying Fortress that is the heroine of the Warner Brothers' production of "Air Force," continuing a second week on the screen at the Earle Theater. The role is rousingly played, as are all the others by John Garfield, Gig Young, Harry Carey, George Tobias and all the rest in the predominantly male cast.

"Air Force" is one of the most imperative of the "musts"

HEDDA HOPPER

Love—It's Wonderful!

Hollywood, Cal., March 12—If John Loder has his way, he'll persuade Hedy Lamarr to go to Mexico for a quick marriage, even though his divorce isn't final until late September. Well. It's been successfully done before, as in the case of Alice Faye and Phil Harris. Could John, in urging an early marriage, be afraid the lady might change her mind? . . . Yes, Bonita Granville has grown up. While on her jaunt across the country, she met Leslie Bush from Cincinnati, a manufacturer of aircraft parts, who's followed her from place to place, and will arrive in Hollywood when she does. . . . This will be a Ginger Rogers' year. So what could be more natural than for Warners to try and persuade her to do the life of Marilynn Miller, which, any way you look at it, is good showmanship.

HEDY LAMARR

Plenty of Stuff

Don Loper finally signed that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract, giving him a chance to produce, direct, dance, and act. Nothing was said about his being a costume designer, or an expert on choreography, but he's as versatile a young man as has ever come to this town, and if they do right by him, he can be built into another Mitch Leisen, who gave him his first training in the movies in "Lady in the Dark." . . . Monogram glorifies aviation mechanics in "Ground Crew," and has signed Jackie Cooper, June Havoc and Sam Levene. Col. Frankie Rose, who's had a great deal of experience around these parts, aided Roland Young in preparing his story.

The Day's Wash

Hear the reason for Constance Moore's separation from Johnny Maschio is because band leader Johnny Green is so persuasive. If they get together, wonder what will happen to their children? Johnny Green adores his daughter by his first wife, so does its mother; and Connie has a little girl, too. . . . Stranger than fiction—if Ruth Chatterton and Ralph Forbes get together in real life again, as they have in "Private Lives" which they're doing in Chicago. . . . Bob Cummings started work opposite Betty Field in the Charles Boyer picture. Bob tells me he's visited every State in the Union in the past three months, as a member of the Civilian Air Patrol.

Cafe Society

All is sweetness and light between Mike Romanoff and Charlie Morrison of Mocambo. Morrison sent Mike a huge heart of sweets as a peace offering . . . Mary Pickford looking like a spring bride done up in a tiny white hat with veil, at Romanoff's entertaining Sue Smith from Burlingame . . . Bubbles Schinazi feeding her mother Ruby, just in from New York—Bubbles wearing one of those hanging fascinators, which I wish she wouldn't . . . Ernst Lubitsch and Helene Reynolds a new duet at a late Hollywood night spot . . . Maria Montez all over town with Pierre Aumont. That, as Sid Skolsky calls it, is a thing . . . Fred Allen wondering if "The Meanest Man in the World" was an autobiography of Jack Benny.

Anything for a Laugh!

Twentieth promised Lynn Barl a big build-up. They're building her up all right. She makes personal appearances with their big pictures—the latest being "Hello, Frisco, Hello," in San Francisco. I don't wonder they're burned up over that title up there . . . Alden Blodget, husband of Cornelia Otis Skinner, arrived by plane, so Cornelia went to Hollywood—with one side of her hair done in a huge pompadour, other side done a la Veronica Lake, wearing the longest eyelashes ever seen. He took one look at her and said, "If there's a plane going back—I'll take it!" Of course, it was a gag.

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, March 12.

There were two leading roles in "Maedchen in Uniform;" one of a tragic girl and the other of a funny girl. Ellen Schwanneke played the funny-girl role both in the Berlin stage production and in the movie adaptation which still is being shown here . . . In 1933, when Hitler conquered Germany, Miss Schwanneke went to Vienna. She didn't answer the printed invitation, signed by Hitler, addressed to all artists, to return and be his guest at the Munich festivals . . . When Hitler grabbed Austria, Ellen went to Switzerland, where, in April, 1939, she obtained her American visa and came to New York. One week later she applied for citzenship.

MME. IVY LITVINOFF

For the past year Ellen Schwanneke has been a junior hostess at the American Theater Wing's Stagedoor Canteen. She also has been doing recordings for the Office of War Information. She will obtain her full citizenship papers next year, after she has met the requirement of five years of residence in this country . . . Last week the American Theater Wing notified her that she no longer may work at the Stagedoor Canteen—because she is an enemy alien.

Coward, McCann has just published Ivy Litvinoff's "Moscow Mystery." It is her third novel, and originally was published in England 12 years ago. This is the story of how the book came to be republished now . . . Mrs. Litvinoff lunched with Charmion Freeman, wife of the author of the new book, "Never Call Retreat." Mrs. Litvinoff told her: "If I could only find my Moscow mystery story, I might be able to republish it now" . . . "I know someone who might have it," said Mrs. Freeman. "There's a lawyer named Sam Goldberg, who has every book concerning the Soviet Union." Mrs. Freeman phoned Goldberg, who said he had the book and would relinquish it, on condition that Mrs. Litvinoff lunch with him in Lindy's. Ivy lunched.

Matt Correa, the United States attorney in New York, will enter the armed services shortly . . . Henry Epstein, the recent solicitor general of the State of New York, may be commissioned in the Army soon . . . George K. Arthur, star of the silent movie, "Rookies," was the youngest member of his brigade, in the last war. Now he is the oldest sergeant in the Eagle Squadron . . . Dwight Fiske returns to the New York night clubs on March 17, when he starts at the Versailles . . . So many socialites have been flocking to one room at the Red Cross blood donor's section that they now refer to that elegant room as "the Savoy-Plasma."

Only a year or so ago Zero Mostel was an unknown WPA painter and art teacher who sometimes entertained at parties. He was hired, at $50 a week, at Cafe Society, and quickly won recognition. He was signed for the Victor Moore-William Gaxton vaudeville show, the Paramount Theater hired him for two weeks at $1250 a week, and he worked for many weeks as the star of the Lower Basin Street radio series—all while working at Cafe Society Uptown. Then he went to Hollywood, to spend the summer as a featured actor in the M-G-M movie, "DuBarry Was a Lady." He returned to the night club—and last week he entered the Army . . . After these mad months of quick fame and riches, with national publicity, he entered the Army with but $4000 in the bank—and owing twice that much for the year's income taxes.

George Sylvester Viereck won't be retried until the 33 conspiracy cases first are done with . . . The producers of the movie, "Stage Door Canteen," are faced with a billing-problem—77 stars appeared before the camera, and while they all waived their rights to star-billing, each must receive equal credit in the advertisements . . . A group of writers saw Louis Bromfield, the author-farmer in Lum Fong's, and discussed the publicity he has been receiving of late. "Is Bromfield really a man of the soil?" one of them asked. "Well, he operates a big farm in Ohio," was the reply, "but Louis is a farmer who has an ear to the ground—and his eye on the reprint rights."

The yet untitled musical which Paul Gallico has written, and which will star Jack Pearl, Vivien Segal and Renee deMarco, will have the Cristianis as one of the features. The Cristianis are the horseback riders now with the Ringling Circus in Sarasota . . . "Doc" Bender, producer of the show, met their demand for fare to bring them and their horses to New York from Florida.

Metropolitan

Having piled up a total aggregate of 10 weeks both as a road show and at popular prices, "Yankee Doodle Dandy" is a strong contender to become filmdom's perennial hit. Moving from the Earle to the Metropolitan Theater, with only a slight intermittent pause, Warner Brothers' film biography of America's beloved song-and-dance man, George M. Cohan, is well on its way to establishing an enviable record for total attendance.

This, of course, is no accident. The primary reason for its success lies in the tremendous entertainment value to which the colorful Cohan has lent itself. His songs and plays were for many years synonymous with the best that the American stage had to offer.

There is, in addition, the splendid performance of James Cagney, who in portraying Cohan on the screen, was awarded the 1942 "Oscar" for his work. The supporting cast is headed by Joan Leslie, Walter Huston, Jeanne Cagney and Rosemary De Camp.

Pix

"Bringing Up Baby," a comedy starring Katherine Hepburn and Cary Grant, is being revived at the Pix. The film opens today for a four-day run.

La Hepburn, a fiery heiress, romps through the picture trying to convince Grant, a gifted young scientist, that the most interesting thing in the world are not bones of prehistoric animals. She finally succeeds by enlisting his aid in "Bringing Up Baby." Baby, incidentally, is a full-grown leopard.

Wings Pinned on Casket of Cadet Killed in Crash

The funeral service for Aviation Cadet J. Harold Gooding, Jr., 22, who was killed in a plane crash last Monday night, was brought to a dramatic close yesterday when his commanding officer, Col. Robert L. Choate, pinned the youth's wings on his casket.

The incident took place in the Metropolitan Memorial Church, Nebraska and New Mexico Avenues Northwest, when the Rev. Edward G. Latch, pastor, called the officer from among the mourners after the ritual was finished.

Also among the mourners at the service was young Gooding's close companion, Cadet Melvin Bradley, of Morrell, Md., who accompanied the body here from Bainbridge Field, Ga. He and young Gooding were among the group of 35 which left Washington August 28.

Cadet Gooding, former Eastern High school football player and student at George Washington University, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harold Gooding, 4324 Forty-sixth Street Northwest.

Burial was in Fort Lincoln Cemetery with military rites.

Auto Crash Is Fatal

Hagerstown, Md., March 12.—Leo F. French, 24, Western Maryland Railway freight conductor, was killed last night when the automobile in which he was riding struck a pole on Route 40 near Clearspring. Otho Haire, Hagerstown, also in the car, escaped with slight injuries.

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

HIYA, MYRTLE! PUT BINGO ON THE 'PHONE! SUNSHINE WANTS TO TALK TO HIM!
YAP! YAP!
HELLO, BIG BOY! THIS IS THE LITTLE BLONDE PEKINGESE WITH THE BIG BLUE RIBBON THAT SMILED AT YOU UP AT THE GROCERY! YIP! YIP!
ARF!
HE FELL FOR IT!

JOE PALOOKA — An Old Friend — By Ham Fisher

YOU WAS SWELL TOSIT ME IN ON THIS. WHAT A PAL. ARE WE GONNA HAVE A TIME, OH BOY.
I DIN'T DO IT FER FRIENDSHIP. I MIGHT NEED YOU. THIS IS SERIOUS BIZNESS.
CAFE DE ANT MORT
AM I DREAMIN'?? IT'S PALOOKA--- TH' BUM'S IN AFRICA!
WHAM
WHY YA BIG SLOB, I'LL--I'LL--
YA BUM! WOT'CHA DOIN' HERE?
TCH-TCH-- HULLO, BALONKI.

JANE ARDEN — Go Get Her — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

I WONDER WHAT'S KEEPING JANE- IT ISN'T LIKE HER TO BE SO LATE-
I SHOULD HAVE KNOWN IT COULDN'T BE-SHE ISN'T COMING-
WHAT DO YOU MEAN IT COULDN'T BE-WHAT'S THIS ALL ABOUT?
YOU MAY AS WELL KNOW- I ASKED JANE TO MARRY ME- IF SHE CAME TONIGHT, HER ANSWER WAS YES-
BUT IF SHE DIDN'T-
AND YOU WAITED! CONFOUND IT, MAN- GO GET HER!
YOU'RE RIGHT-I WILL!

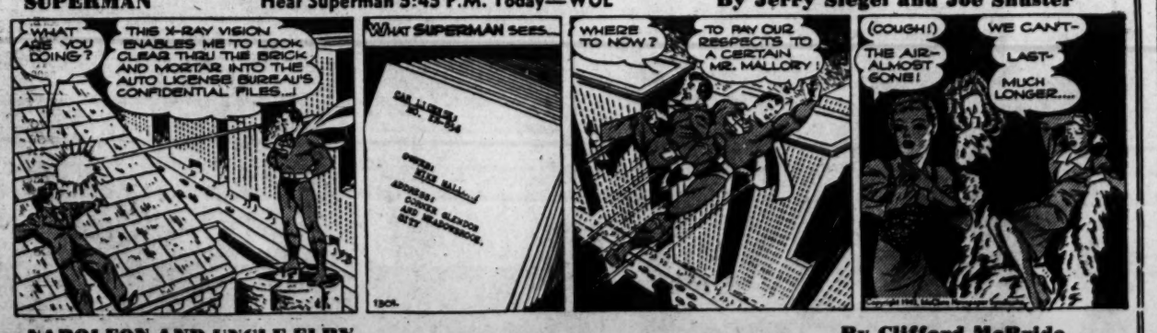
SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster



WHAT ARE YOU DOING?
THIS X-RAY VISION ENABLES ME TO LOOK CLEAR THRU THE BRICK AND MORTAR INTO THE AUTO LICENSE BUREAU'S CONFIDENTIAL FILES...!
WHAT SUPERMAN SEES...

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — The Boarder Is a Hoarder — By Milton Caniff

THE RED TOP DEMANDS A BATH!
WHY WILL THAT WOMAN NOT RESIGN HERSELF TO THE FACT THAT SHE IS TO DIE...
THE RED TOP DEMANDS A BATH WITH SOAP!
SOAP? IS THIS A TIME FOR SUCH LUXURIES?...AH, WELL—SINCE SHE IS CONDEMNED, GIVE IT TO HER!
A SAD PIECE OF SOAP —BUT EET HAS NOT THE ODOR—THEES EES GOOD...
ROUGE BATHES WEETH PART—AND SAVES THE REMAINPAIR TO GO WEETH THE ALMONDS SO CAREFILLY PRESAIRVED...THE ESCAPE BEGEENS TO LOOK MORE POSSEEBLE!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

WHAT'S WRONG, MR. PARKER?... HAD BURGLARS?
NO, OFFICER!... WORSE THAN THAT!
A PERSON WHO HAS SHARED MY FOOD AND ENJOYED THE PROTECTION OF MY HOME HAS TURNED ON ME LIKE A ROTTEN TRAITOR!
I'VE KNOWN FOR WEEKS THAT THIS PERSON HAD A DARK PAST. BUT, LIVE AND LET LIVE IS MY CREED! WHEN THAT PERSON ATTEMPTS TO PRACTICE FORGERY UNDER MY VERY ROOF, HOWEVER, I AM FORCED TO TAKE ACTION...
OFFICER! ARREST THAT BLACK SCOUNDREL!... CRAYTON, MY BUTLER!

MICKEY FINN — A Distress Signal! — By Lank Leonard

YOU'VE ONLY BEEN HOME SIX HOURS AND YOU WANT TO GO DOWN TO HEADQUARTERS!
WE WANT TO SEE INSPECTOR BIFFALICK AND THE BOYS, FLOSSIE!
AND WE'LL BE BACK EARLY!
DON'T THEY LOOK SWELL, MULLIGAN?
THAT THEY DO, INSPECTOR! WELL, JOHNNY WE PROMISED THE FOLKS WE'D BE HOME EARLY—WE'LL BE DOWN AGAIN!
I GUESS THEY'RE DOIN' OKAY WITHOUT US, MICKEY!
YEAH! JOHNNY SAID THINGS ARE NICE AND QUIET AND—OOO-OW!
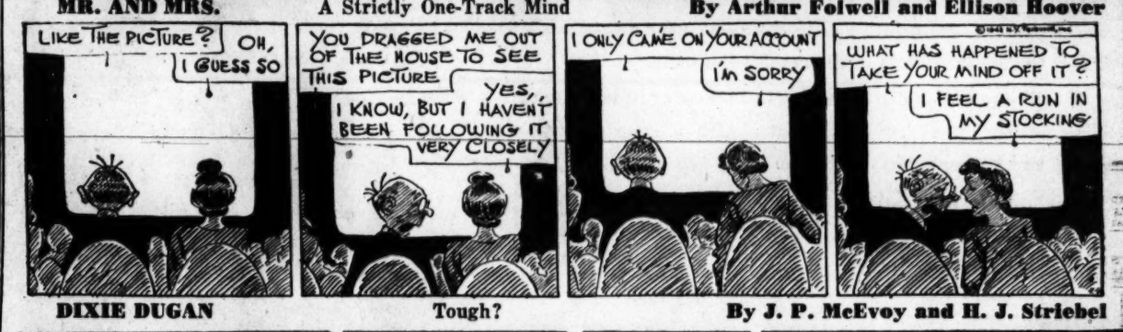
GOSH! A SAILOR!
YEAH! AND HE'S BEEN SLUGGED!

MR. AND MRS. — A Strictly One-Track Mind — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover



LIKE THE PICTURE? OH, I GUESS SO
YOU DRAGGED ME OUT OF THE HOUSE TO SEE THIS PICTURE
YES, I KNOW, BUT I HAVENT BEEN FOLLOWING IT VERY CLOSELY
I ONLY CAME ON YOUR ACCOUNT
I'M SORRY
WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO TAKE YOUR MIND OFF IT?
I FEEL A RUN IN MY STOCKING

DIXIE DUGAN — Tough? — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

NOW DO YA KNOW WHERE YER AT?
IF I'M NOT MISTAKEN IT'S A SECTION OF TOWN THEY USED TO CALL "HADES PANTRY"! SILLY NAME!
- BUT THAT WAS AFTER THE FIRST WORLD WAR WHEN PROHIBITION AND GANGSTERS AND GANG WARS HELD THE SPOTLIGHT—
?- HOWEVER, IT DIDN'T TAKE LONG FOR LAW AND ORDER TO CLEAN OUT THE RATS CALLED RACKETEERS, AND NOW IT'S A TAME LITTLE SECTION OF TOWN— UH ~ UH ~
GO ON—
??— UH— WELL-IT-IT'S NOT A TOUGH PLACE ANYMORE— THAT IS, SO I'VE HEARD— ? ???

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Low Twelve — By Frank Martinek

LOTUS AND WINSLOW NERVOUSLY AWAIT THE STROKE OF LOW TWELVE AND THE APPEARANCE OF THEIR DISGUISED CHINESE GUARD.
SUDDENLY THERE APPEARS IN THE DOORWAY A FIGURE. STARTLED, LOTUS AWAITS THE STRANGERS SPOKEN WORD.
S-SH.... NO NOISE! CAN YOU WALK, COMMANDER WINSLOW?
YES, HE CAN WALK, WITH OUR HELP!
WHAT ABOUT RED AND GILBERT?
ALLAY YOUR FEARS, YAT-SEN IS TAKING CARE OF THAT. WE WILL JOIN THEM AT THE COVE IF ALL IS WELL.

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

STEVE! BUT YOU NOT ALIVE-- HUH?
IN THE FLESH!-- AND A BORROWED BATH ROBE, PAL!
LATCH THAT DROOPING JAW, CHIEF, AND LISTEN TO A ROUND UP OF THE LATEST NEWS---!
WHEN I HIT THE WATER, I CAME TO ENOUGH TO SHUCK OFF MY BOOTS AN' BRITCHES! NEXT THING I KNEW, I WAS IN A BERTH ON THIS YACHT!
BUT, THIS IS THE JACKPOT, CHIEF! -- WE'RE SAILING ON HER TOMORROW --- FOR HOME!!

DONALD DUCK — Merry-Go-Round! — BY WALT DISNEY

WAA! LOUIE HIT ME!
YEAH, WELL, SMACK HIM RIGHT BACK! REMEMBER, "TURN ABOUT IS FAIR PLAY!"
GEE, THAT'S A GOOD SAYING, UNCA DONALD! THANKS!
DON'T MENTION IT, DEWEY!
WAA! LOUIE BEAT ME UP!
DOGGONE IT, DIDN'T "Y" TELL HIM, "TURN ABOUT IS FAIR PLAY"?
YEP. I TOLD HIM THAT AND SMACKED HIM, BUT HE SAID, "ONE—GOOD TURN DESERVES ANOTHER," AND SMACKED ME BACK!

F STREET, 7th STREET, E STREET

NATIONAL 5100

Dear Tired Business Man:

In these hectic days, Mister, after you've spent a harrowing day at the office or factory, you're entitled to your off-duty hours of relaxation.

Here's a way to bounce right back from the disturbing problems which bother you from 9 'til 6. Just slip into one of these plaid sport shirts . . . whispering plaids we call them because of their quiet, eye-soothing patterns. Now don a pair of slacks. Slouch down into a deep chair or go for a brisk walk. These clothes are right and the result's the same.

If you're going for a stroll, taking in a movie or pedaling your bike, button on a sleeveless sweater with a colorful sports jacket and you're perfectly at ease.

Relax, Mister, and let yourself go. Snap out of the winter doldrums into cheery casual clothes. We're ready to serve you. That's what we mean by
